ANNIE MORECROFT, GIRL SWIMMER, IN WATER COSTUME

SHOT SELF AS BRIDE LOOKED ON

Fred W. Cheney, well known in Boston and one of the most prominent young business men of Manchester, N. H., it was learned to-day, lies at the point of death in a hospital at Grand Junction, Colo., as a result of a bullet wound which he fired into his head with suicidal intent last night. The news has greatly surprised and shocked his friends in this and his home city.

Cheney was on his wedding trip, having been married in June to Miss Alice May Morse, a wealthy and brilliant young woman of his home city. It was said in Manchester to-day that Cheney had suffered from nervous trouble before he went on his honeymoon, but letters from the young couple indicated that the journey had done him good.

The latest news this afternoon from Grand Junction was that Cheney was not expected to survive the wound in his head. He shot himself in front of his bride.

On Their Way Home.

The couple were on their way back from the Pacific coast, where they had been spending their honeymoon. They stopped at Grand Junction simply to break the long journey across the continent.

After registering at a hotel Mr. and Mrs. Cheney went to their room. Soon after that there was a shot. Cheney was found unconscious with a wound in his head and his wife had fainted.

Mrs. Cheney said later that her husband had shot himself. She said she could give no reason for his act.

Spent $4,500 on Honeymoon.

When the dying man's pockets were searched to see if anything could be found that would enlighten the hotel people as to the cause of his act, nothing was discovered but $500 in cash. That, Mrs. Cheney said, was all that was left of $5,000 with which they left Boston. They had spent money very freely on their trip and had had a good time, she explained.

Cheney is twenty-three years of age. He is the son of Reuben H. Cheney of Manchester. The father is New Hampshire manager of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company. The son had a promising future and has a host of friends. So far as is known he had no bad habits.

Wife Socially Prominent.

Miss Morse is the oldest daughter of Frank Morse. His home is in the aristocratic North End, not far from that of former Governor Charles M. Floyd, and in the heart of a district filled with historic associations.

Frank Morse's wife died several years ago and his son-in-law became the husband of Walter Woodman, auditor of the Southern New Hampshire Railways Company. They live in Haverhill. This left Miss Alice May Morse, a woman in the thirties, the sole companion of her father, and their attachment was so strong that it was supposed that she would miss his companion until death separated them.

Not a day passed but Frank Morse went home directly from his office and went for a long ride with his daughter. Miss Morse always drove and she and her father talked on the topics of the day. She, through these talks and her father's connection with the business and political life of New Hampshire, became almost as well informed as he and was considered one of the most brilliant girls in New Hampshire.

On June 11 it was announced that Miss Morse and Cheney had been married. Miss Morse was said to be well-to-do, an impression which in New Hampshire means to have a fortune of perhaps $30,000 to $50,000.

GIRL SWIMS SEVEN MILES; THEN GIVES UP

Annie Morecroft, the fifteen-year-old girl, one of the Woodcliand diving girls, who tried to swim to Boston Light to-day, was ordered by Dr. W. C. Crockett to leave the water at 12:15 this afternoon, off Long Island Head.

She had been in the water for just five hours. The girl began to grow sick from the action of the water and the rain which beat mercilessly on her for four hours of the swim.

She dived into the water from the Warren bridge in the presence of a large crowd at 7:12 and started down the harbor with a strong, leisurely stroke.

By 7:40 she was opposite T wharf and swimming well.

A rowboat accompanied Miss Morecroft. In it were McLean, Dr. Crockett, Bob Stafford and George Morecroft, Annie's brother.

Following the girl as she ploughed her way through the water came a tug chartered by H. H. Potter, her manager.

WOMAN FAINTS AS SHE IS FINED $5

Wife Milida Gordon of No. 95 Adams street, Dorchester, was fined $5 for assault and battery upon James T. Hale of the same address in the Dorchester District Court to-day by Judge R. Churchill, she became hysterical and fainted. Each charged the other with assault. Mrs. Gordon telephoned to her husband for the money to pay the fine.

WOULD GO TO CONGRESS.

James T. Doyle of Ward 10 is making a thorough canvass for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eleventh District. The retirement of Thomas H. Dowd from the field leaves Mr. Doyle as Ward 10's only candidate. In an article describing the Congressional race in the Eleventh District Mr. Doyle's appeared as "John T." instead of James T. Doyle.

LIQUOR CASES MAKE QUINCY COURT BUSY

QUINCY, Sept. 1.—Several liquor cases and one of alleged forgery and uttering, coupled with the arraignment of a young woman auto speeder, occupied the attention of Judge Avery in the local court today. Miss Spencer Hallock of Brookline paid a fine of $15, after Inspector Gaudine testified that she was exceeding the speed limit with her car. Frank A. Moran, manager of the Squantum Inn paid $100 to the court after being convicted of violating the liquor law at his hotel. The charge of like nature against Mrs. Christina Lee, who runs the Lee Squantum Inn brought forth testimony from policemen that they were sold beer, when they made a request of a waitress. The case was continued until to-morrow. Judge Avery held John Guilford of Goddard street for the Grand Jury after testimony had been introduced to show that he had forged a check for $76.98.

FOUR MOTORISTS ARE FINED IN DORCHESTER

Four autoists appeared in the Dorchester District Court to-day before Judge Churchill, charged with violations of the automobile laws. George W. Mansfield of No. 487 Washington street, Brookline, was fined $10 for not having his rear lamp lighted. Ira E. Goddard of Fresh Hill road, Milton, for not sounding his horn at intersecting streets, was fined $10. Frank A. Sullivan of No. 678 Columbia road, Dorchester, and Harold Knowlton of West Upton were each fined $10 for speeding on Blue Hill avenue. All paid out Knowlton, who appealed.

NEW YORK NEAR FIVE MILLION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The Census Bureau to-day announced the population of the Borough of Brooklyn as 1,634,351.

This is an increase of 404 over the figures of 1900, which were 1,166,382.

This ratio of increase, if applied to all New York, would give the greater city population as about 4,870,000.

The Greater New York population ten years ago was 3,437,202.

The population of Yonkers, announced to-day as 79,803, is an increase of 60.5 over 1900, when it was 47,931. This is another evidence of the remarkable growth of New York as a centre of population, as Yonkers is a suburb of the Metropolis.

Elmira, N. Y., under the new census, has 37,176 residents, an increase of only 4.2 per cent. in ten years. The population ten years ago was 35,672.

DOVES GAME OFF; TWO GAMES FRIDAY

Fred Lake looked up at the sky all morning and tried to persuade himself that the field at the Walpole Street Grounds would be in fit condition before 2 o'clock this afternoon.

But he couldn't induce himself to let the men go out, after he had seen the condition of the diamond this noon.

Accordingly, at a late hour, it was announced that the game was called off for the day, and that a double-header would be played Friday at 2 o'clock. The management itself almost the first minute after making his decision, because the team can't afford many more double headers, especially as the season is getting late.

"HOLY GHOST" BARK KINGDOM FLOATED

A dispatch received in Boston to-day states that the barkentine Kingdom, which went ashore on the Nova Scotian coast, was floated off the reef on which it stranded and has been towed into Yarmouth, N. S., leaking badly. This vessel is one of the Rev. Frank Sandford's "Holy Ghost" fleet. The barkentine was ordered out a few days ago and the Sandfordites saved their lives with difficulty. It was feared that the vessel would be pounded to pieces by surf before she could be floated. A gale has since the wreck enabled her being salvaged.

$36,063 LOW BID FOR NEW PUMPS

The Power Equipment Company submitted the lowest bid for two steam pumps at the Calf Pasture pumping station, Dorchester, it was found when the bids were opened at noon to-day by the superintendent of streets. The bid was $36,063, while that of the Terry Steam Turbine Company was $41,980 and that of the General Electric Company $46,894. It was not announced who would get the contract. This will be announced in a few days. The new pumps must have a capacity of 50,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours, while the old ones only pump half that amount.

COAL OPERATORS SEEK TO ARREST MINERS

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 1.—Coal operators to-day continued their sensational fight against rights of striking miners at Irwin Coal Fields. Over forty deputies, armed with warrants for the arrest of men alleged to be responsible for the present coal struggle, started out to place these men under arrest. The first step of what may prove to be on of the bitterest labor wars in the history of the country, and which so far has cost twenty-five lives, started yesterday, when the coal companies filed suit against eighty-seven men they say are leaders.

CHRISTINE NIELSEN WEDS A HORSEMAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—It became known to-day that Christine Nielsen, the actress, was secretly married on July 15 at Saratoga to Joseph P. Leffler, a real estate dealer and horseman. Miss Nielsen will not retire from the stage. She is a native of California.

Five-year-old Alphonso Riccio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Riccio of No. 7 Cedar street, Mt. Auburn district, Watertown, who wandered from his home since noon Tuesday, was returned to-day to his parents. He was picked up last night on the streets of Revere by policemen of Station 10 and the Watertown police notified.

SHOWERS STOP GRAND CIRCUIT AT READVILLE

READVILLE RACE TRACK, Sept. 1.—A heavy shower this morning made the track a sea of mud, obliging the management to call off the races scheduled till to-morrow and running the Grand Circuit meeting into Saturday.

The events on the program were the Massachusetts and Bunker Hill stakes and the 2:10 trotting class. The Harvester was down to go against the world's stallion record of 2:02, but unless the track be fast his attempt will not be put on till Saturday.

HEATON TRIES CHANNEL SWIM

DOVER, Eng., Sept. 1.—Undaunted by the defeat of Edward Meyer in his attempt to swim the English Channel yesterday, Ted Heaton started from Dover to-day for Calais. Two noted swimmers, Burgess and Wyckham, accompanied him in a boat.

At the end of the fifth hour, Heaton had covered eight miles and was still going strong.

In midchannel Heaton was making splendid progress. He gave no indication of tiring, changing his stroke occasionally only to vary the monotony. He was given beef tea and hot milk at times and now and then ashood for something more solid. He expressed confidence of being in the press and recommending him.

RAIN SPOILS RED SOX AND DOVES' GAMES

Rain and wet grounds postponed both the Red Sox and Doves games to-day. The Sox were to have played Brooklyn at the South End Grounds, but will put on a double-header beginning at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon instead.

The Red Sox were to have opened an exciting struggle, with second place honors involved, with the Yankees at New York.

The bad weather was general throughout the East and the game scheduled between the Giants and Phillies at Philadelphia was also called off. This left but nine games in the big leagues—the Athletics at Washington and the Pirates at Cincinnati.

The Senators are playing great baseball just now and are due to take at least one fall out of Mack's leaders before the season ends. The followers of the Speed Boys all had their eyes on what the Athletics would do to-day.

They dropped another with Detroit yesterday and if the Senators can do as well against them as the Tigers did there, a still hope for Boston in the pennant race.

SAY CREW LEFT 'EM TO BE RESCUED

QUINCY, Sept. 1.—Hough's Neck summer residents are saying uncomplimentary things to-day concerning the action of the officers of the steamer sailing there, it is alleged that the vessel proceeded on her way, leaving two men who had been tipped out of their boat by her propeller to be rescued by others. Captain John Evans of Hingham, sixty-five, with Herbert Westcott of Hough's Neck, were the boys rescued by Chauncy Furnald, who set out to them in his boat. The men assert that the propeller of the steamer caught in a rope attached to their craft and threw both overboard, put the craft locked on and made no effort to pick them up.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE SAILS FOR PANAMA

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—James Bryce, the British Ambassador to the United States and Mrs. Bryce, sailed from New York to-day on the Santa Marta for Colon. The Ambassador was in splendid health, as was his wife. He said that he would spend a number of days looking at the canal construction and would then go to Chile, where he and Mrs. Bryce will study the flora of that republic. Both are great botanists. They will go to Buenos Aires, make a trip through the Straits of Magellan and then to England before returning to this country.

Hogarty, wife of Patrick Hogarty of No. 16 Ivaloo street, Roxbury, who was drowned while trying to rescue her child from the Jamaica Plain pond, were held at St. Joseph's Church, South street, Jamaica Plain, to-day. Rev. John A. Sheridan officiated. A high mass of requiem was sung from the deed. The burial was at New Calvary, Mt. Hope Cemetery, Roslindale.

GREAT AVIATORS HERE; MACHINES ARE MADE READY

Wilbur Wright of the famous Wright Brothers of aviation fame, arrived in the Harvard Aviation Field at Squantum this afternoon.

He was accompanied by Ralph Johnstone and Walter Brookins, two of the most sensational aviators in the Wright camp.

Wilbur Wright will not fly. Johnstone and Brookins will do the flying here for the Wright machines.

Two Wright biplanes will arrive to-morrow.

WRIGHT LOOKS FOR SOME NEW RECORDS.

Wilbur Wright said: "I expect this meet Lewis R. Speare and Carl A. Sylvester will be most successful. The prospect for Chatranau records is good."

Another arrival on the field to-day was William Hilliard of the Burgess aviation camp.

Clende Grahame-White and A. V. Roe, the two English entrants to the Harvard meet, also arrived in town to-day, coming on the White Star liner Cymric. They are accompanied by three mechanicians for Grahame-White and two for Roe. With the party, also, is Sidney McDonald, friend of Grahame-White, who will make pleasure flights with him.

Brings Farman Biplane.

This is the first time in this country for the two English aviators. Both are enthusiastic for the meet. Both are sucoed in all events.

White brought a Farman biplane and a Bleriot monoplane. He will use the biplane in every event except the speed trials. For that event he will use the Bleriot monoplane, which he believes the speediest in the air with it.

Roe brought one machine, his famous triplane or "three-decker," as they call it. One of the Roe triplanes arrived here last week on the Ivernia, consigned to a party to whom it had been sold. That now is still in crate at the Charnel docks.

While brought three mechanicians. They are R. C. Hucker, Reginald Carr and Arthur Turner. Roe has two mechanicians, Howard Pixton and J. Halstead. The mechanicians, like their principals, are English. The aviators, mechanicians and Mr. McDonald, White's friend, made up the total party of eight aviation experts and automobiles.

The Harvard Aeronautical Society, which is in charge of the coming meet, had made careful and courteous arrangements to greet the Englishmen and to expedite their passage through dock and customs.

The Cymric was met at quarantine by J. V. Martin, manager of the Harvard Aeronautical Society and a body of reporters and photographers. At the dock a reception committee from the society was waiting, composed of J. C. Burr,

A Typical Britisher.

At quarantine Professor Martin was first over the side of the Cymric. He spied, crossing the deck, a ruddy-faced, stocky man, typically British, weighing about 135 pounds and about thirty-five years of age. Professor Martin had met A. V. Roe in England and spotted him at first glance.

"How do you do, Mr. Roe."

"Why, Professor Martin, delighted to see you."

Then other greetings followed. After inquiring of Mr. Roe's trip, his health and so on, Professor Martin learned that Grahame-White was below. He started after him, while Roe was buttonholed by the reporters.

A. V. Roe is a fine type of professional engineer, both mechanical and marine. He is now a professional aviator, a bright, enthusiastic man, mild of manner and not striking one at first glance as a sky-pilot who takes his life in an aeroplane and goes up into the air with it.

"I shall enter in all the contests," he said, "and, of course, I hope to win. But it's my impression that the Farman machine, equipped with 'anzani engine, will be the speediest."

"That was a sportsmanlike remark, a tribute to the type of machine used by his friendly rival and fellow-voyager, Grahame-White. It might as well-add right here that when Grahame-White was told what Roe had said he smiled modestly and said he would do his best.

Expects Big Things of White.

Continuing about his competitor, Roe said:

"I look for Mr. Grahame White to make a big Kicking. Not that I particularly favor the biplane style of construction, but the famous engine is the last word in aeronautical engineering. If I had known as much about the Gnome engine six months ago as I do now, I would have equipped my biplanes with them, and would now be telling a different story. My machine has only a 75-horsepower engine of our own design."

"In favor the triplane style of frame

CAR BUMPS IN TERMINAL AND STARTS PANIC

Two persons were severely injured, many people and many others were badly shaken up when a crowded Medford car crashed into one of the bumpers at the Sullivan square terminal of the Boston Elevated Railway.

The accident occurred at 7:40 o'clock and caused great excitement. Many were knocked down and trampled on in the panic that followed. Men and women participated in the mad struggle to gain the car exits and several suffered from slight injuries received in this manner.

Two Severely Injured.

John A. Regan, forty-three, of No. 2 Edwards place, Medford, received contusions about the shoulder and hip.

Mrs. R. J. McCarthy of No. 11 Florence street, Somerville, another passenger, was found to be suffering from contusions of the right side and back. Both were generally to the Relief Hospital in the ambulance by Chief Eleck.

The elevated officials are unable to account for the accident as they say that the car was going slowly at the time and the brakes appear to have been in good working order.

Women Shriek With Fright.

The shock of the collision was heard all over the terminal, and a great throng, intent on taking the train in town hurried to the track where the accident took place. Women, caught in the vortex of the tide of humanity that pushed and struggled to get out of the vehicle, shrieked in fright, and even after being brought to the platform in safety showed signs of hysteria. The injured man and woman were carried out after the car had been cleared. The car was but slightly damaged, and the bumper has only to be straightened to place it in service again.

GIANT HYDRANT BLOWS UP AND CAUSES FLOOD

With a crash and a roar a giant hydrant at Portland and Cambridge streets, East Cambridge, exploded this afternoon about half hour after a passing wagon had jolted heavily against it. Both Portland street and Cambridge were soon filled with a torrent of water which flooded stores, dwelling houses and poured into the cellars.

In a half hour the water stood from two to three feet deep in Portland street and a regular river was rushing down Portland to Cambridgeport.

The water department sent a big gang to turn off the water. This was hard to do on account of the force of the flood and the flood meantime continued to rise. One temporary stopping of the dollars was done by the flood in store and dwelling house cellars.

Street cars and teams floundered along in water which came to the tops of the car wheels. Children had a merry time wading in the water which came above their knees.

HOLYOKE PUTS BAN ON FIGHT PICTURES

HOLYOKE, Sept. 1.—City Marshal Thomas J. Lynch has put the ban on the Jeffries-Johnson prizefight pictures here. Arrangements had been under way to show the pictures in Temperance Hall. The city marshal refused to grant a permit to-day and gave his reasons as follows: I refused permission to exhibit the pictures here because I do not believe Holyoke should be the pioneer in this line in Massachusetts. I do not see any manifestations of public sentiment in favor of the exhibition and if there is a call for the show it must be weak."

ROOSEVELT AT INSURGENTS' LOVE FEAST

LAWRENCE, Kas., Sept. 1—After his whirlwind trip into this insurgent State, Colonel Roosevelt this morning in his special train for Kansas City, Mo. The ex-President was in fine humor as he talked with newspaper correspondents before the train pulled out of the depot here. He felt that he accomplished something yesterday for the Progressive movement when he made his stirring speech at Osawatomie in which he expounded his ideas as to what he called the "new nationalism."

United States Senator Bristow, and others of the insurgent leaders in this State predicted today that with Colonel Roosevelt's help the insurgent candidates for Congress in the State this Fall would be elected with hardly an exception. The Insurgents are thoroughly organized, as was evidenced in the Republican party council, when they passed with an over-whelming majority the platform criticising the Taft administration for having failed to enact a more satisfactory tariff law and commending Theodore Roosevelt as the champion of the rights of the people, under whom they would enlist.

Cause Greatly Aided.

With Colonel Roosevelt coming out straight for the Insurgents, as he did in his speech at Osawatomie yesterday, the Progressives in Kansas say their cause has been immeasurably strengthened. After the trip from Osawatomie last night, Colonel Roosevelt, Senator Bristow, Congressman Madison, William Allen White and many other leaders of the State insurgency had a love feast at the home of Governor Stubbs, another of the Progressives who wants to be United States senator to succeed Senator Curtis, the pink-ribbed standpatter.

It is believed that Colonel Roosevelt assured Governor Stubbs of his support for the senatorship. The Insurgents were in great humor after the whirl of events of the day. They told Colonel Roosevelt that it was the biggest day Kansas City insurgency had known.

Insurgent Love Feast.

The Insurgent band sat at Governor Stubbs's table surrounding Colonel Roosevelt on either side and talked hopefully of their prospects. The dinner table was set in a large hall of the Governor's home overlooking the hills of Lawrence. It was 11 o'clock before Colonel Roosevelt returned to his private car in the railroad yard from where he spent the night.

TREMENDOUS DEAL IN TOBACCO TRADE

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 1—The American Tobacco Company has bought from the Burley Tobacco Society 118,000,000 pounds remaining from the 1909 crop, and has taken an option on the entire crop of 1910, according to a report current in this private city. The railroad yard here will be 18 cents today.

DIES BY POISON AFTER QUARREL

A pathetic suicide took place early today in the basement of the lodging house at No. 5 Stanford street, West End, when a young woman known as Mrs. Laura Bailey drank carbolic acid following a quarrel with a man supposed to be her husband. The scream died ten minutes after her arrival at the Relief Hospital. Bailey is reported missing.

Loud voices were heard in the Gaulers' room early today, and a short time later the husband was heard to leave the house. He had been gone only a few moments when Mrs. Gauley came out. She was weeping. In the hall she met Miss Mary Rooney, another lodger.

"He said he would never see me again and that he was through with me forever," cried Mrs. Gauley.

Suddenly she started back into the room and, snatching a key from her handbag, opened her trunk and took out an ounce bottle of carbolic acid. Before anyone could reach her side Mrs. Gauley raised the contents.

Mrs. Gauley was well dressed and wore quite expensive jewelry. None of the other people in the household could tell where the couple had gone nor who her relatives were. She was supposed to have arrived Wednesday at the Lenox Hotel, but inquiries there failed to reveal anybody by that name.

DENIES MAYOR'S CHARGE.

Mayor Fitzgerald's charge that the results of the census taking in Massachusetts are being held back for political reasons was flatly denied by Charles P. Gettemy, director of the State Bureau of Statistics. In a statement issued today, Mr. Gettemy is census supervisor for the Massachusetts district. He said: "No political influence has been brought to bear to make me hold back the census figures. That talk is all wrong."

PROF. SARGENT TELLS HOW HE CAUGHT THIEF

Professor Charles S. Sargent of Harvard University and one of Brookline's most prominent citizens, had an adventure at Brookville on Tuesday with a man who he said by the police to be one of the cleverest pickpockets now out of jail. Andrew P. Sargent, Professor Sargent's son, arrested the accused man at the Brookville station and made him ride beside him on a passenger train until the South Station was reached, where he turned him over to Policeman Walton of the Lagrange street station.

"I told him," said young Mr. Sargent when a witness in the Dedham District Court to-day, "that I would smash him if he did not keep quiet." Young Mr. Sargent is a six-footer and broad in proportion. The prisoner was like a limb while in his custody.

Doctor Saw Theft.

Professor Sargent was jostled about while the train stood at the Brookville station on the New Haven road and Dr. A. K. P. Rogers of South Portland, Me., watched the stranger who did it.

"Have you lost your money?" Dr. Rogers asked Professor Sargent, who at once put a hand in his pocket and discovered that $62 was missing. Dr. Rogers pointed out a man who was then in the custody of Troy, N. Y., and fifty-seven years old, as the man who had pushed Professor Sargent about and the suspect fled into the lavatory room and then jumped the platform with young Mr. Sargent at his heels. Mr. Sargent seized him on the platform and dragged him back toward the train.

Offered Money Back.

"He told me he would give back the money if I would let him go," testified Mr. Sargent before Judge Hutchinson in the Dedham Court to-day. "I made him sit beside me on the way to Boston and told him what I thought of him."

The Boston police say that Cole is a professional pickpocket who has served several terms since 1883, and that two years ago he was arrested at Brookville on a similar charge and while at liberty under $1,000 bonds jumped bail. Judge Hutchinson held him in $2,500 for the Norfolk County Grand Jury to-day. Both Professor Sargent and Dr. Rogers appeared to testify against him.

LYNN FIREMAN SAVES LITTLE GIRL

LYNN, Sept. 1.—Engineer George M. Wilson of the Glenmere Fire Station here is being acclaimed a hero to-day by his fellow-citizens because he saved the life of an eight-year-old girl who was just about to be run down by a trolley car. Wilson was riding at the front seat of a Lynn Woods car in Chestnut street. The little girl came running down Adams street and she evidently didn't see the car, for she continued right in the car's path. There she slipped and fell. Motorman Moran put on the brakes, but the car skidded. Engineer Wilson, seeing the danger, climbed on the front and reaching down with his foot lifted the child's body from between the rails and literally kicked her out of the way. The girl, scared almost out of her wits, jumped up and scampered away.

$16,000 HERD OF CATTLE ON LINER

A $16,000 herd of forty-five Jersey cattle was the big feature of the cargo brought into Boston to-day by the Leyland liner Philadelphian. The cattle are the property of H. Prentice and Lord Rothschild of Worcester, who imported them. The head of the herd is the famous Majah Pogis 99th, a bull, for which Mr. Prentice paid $8,000 in England. This animal, said to be the largest and most expensive bull ever brought into the United States, made his first prize for himself and first for bull and progeny at the Royal Cork show on the Island of Jersey, England.

MYSTERIOUS AIRSHIP WAS CAPTIVE KITE

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The mystery of the strange aircraft that hovered over the heart of Manhattan for two nights is solved to-day, and the "airship" is a kite. Edward B. L. Champion, are hunting for a big box kite that broke away from them from the roof of their home, No. 204 East Twenty-first street, they took up the kite, hanging from it some private Fire Department lanterns. Those were the six lights described by spectators who saw the kite over the Metropolitan tower. The white of the moon, described by many of the spectators, must have been the engaging of a nearby searchlight.

LA FOLLETTE MAN COMMITS SUICIDE

BURBANK IN THE FIELD

William H. Burbank of No. 23 Truro street, Revere, has announced his candidacy for election to the Sewer Commission of that town, or the next town caucus. Mr. Burbank was badly defeated for nomination for the Park Commission by John Monahan of Beachmont, and after much urging by friends has consented to run for a place on the Sewer Commission.

SOCIETY BAREFOOT DANCER WHO WILL APPEAR ON STAGE

Countess De Swirsky.

TITLED DANCER QUITS SOCIETY FOR THE STAGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The Countess Tamara De Swirsky has ended her most spectacular Summer at Newport, but ceased to dazzle the purlieu of pleasure-hated society, has given up her teaching of her barefoot dances to the girls and matrons of the "four hundred" and has come to New York to go on the vaudeville stage.

It is understood that the dances she gave at Mrs. James R. Haggins's on August 16 now will be seen in public in this city.

Mrs. Haggins had prepared a stage under the balconies of her house where her guests were assembled. The stage was decorated with oak branches studded with roses, and, under a soft but revealing light, the Countess suddenly plunged into the midst of the woodland illusion.

She was clad like a Grecian statue in one diaphanous silken garment closely encircling her graceful form, and no other covering save a red work of jewels upon her dark red hair.

She bounded upon the scene to the stirring measures of Dvorak's Russian dance, now whirling in seeming abandon, now pausing in poses that won applause.

Now the presentation of the dance from the rounded feet and restless body interpreting the measures of the music in a way that startled while it thrilled the onlookers.

Among those who have witnessed her performances are John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Theodore Dehlie, Mrs. Peter Dougherty, Henry Chews, Prince Rhea, Khan of Persia, and Miss James P. Kernochan.

The Countess was asked by fashionable women to teach them her art and she instructed several. Arturo Toscanini has said that she possesses the most musical body in the world.

BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

UNITED STATES IS NEAR BREAK WITH PANAMA

COLON, Sept. 1.—The relations between the United States and Panama are at the breaking point to-day. Washington's interrention with the plans of Acting President Mendoza, who had hoped to be elected to succeed himself, has created a furore in the little republic.

The citizens believe that the fact that the United States was able to dictate in the internal affairs of the country and force Mendoza to resign sweeps away all pretence of their independence, according to political leaders.

With the calling of the National Assembly to-day amid scenes of excitement the situation neared a climax. The situation has been made worse by a clash between Mendoza and Col. Goethals, head of the canal construction work. Mendoza sent a messenger asking Col. Goethals to call at the presidential palace. The answer by messenger asked if he were wished personally or in his official capacity.

Several other notes were passed back and forth. Goethals finally gained. When he reached the palace Mendoza refused to see him. It is understood that the result was caused by Colonel Goethals drawing the color line in the first place. Mendoza being a negro. The activity of the United States in Central America of late has increased the uneasiness among the native republics. The newspapers are making much of the Mendoza affair, and Washington's influence in Nicaragua.

The general opinion-comment is bitter, the general belief being that Washington's opposition to Mendoza is based on the latter. It is understood on good authority, however, that the real objection is his unfriendly attitude to the United States.

REPEAT BURGLARY OF CLOTHING STORE

It was discovered to-day that some time during the night thieves broke into one of the rooms of the Paris Suit & Cloak Company on the second floor of the building at No. 19 Washington street and stolen goods to the value of $500 worth of clothing.

The burglars gained an entrance by breaking the glass in a hall window. The theft was discovered by Phillip Shaffer, the proprietor, when he opened the store to-day. It is supposed the thieves are the same ones who broke into the place in a similar manner in the latter part of June at which time more than $300 worth of clothing was taken. The safe containing a large amount of cash was untouched.

All the business men of the district have been invited to attend the rally.

TROOPS GUARD 2 INDICTED NEGROES

Wayne killed Deputy Sheriff Mrs. John Allifie and fatally injuring her husband near Quinnimont; the other of murdering a Chesapeake & Ohio track foreman. Wayne was taken to the penitentiary at Moundsville to-day to prevent lynchers. The indictments came in the presence of militia and machine guns brought there Tuesday, when a mob surrounded the jail, remains threatening. Troops will stay throughout the trials.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—An ocean race of 14,000 miles from Pedang, Sumatra, to Sandy Hook, between the Bonsuna and the Gaspea, two barks of equal age and equal tonnage, carrying cargoes and commanded by skippers of the same nationality, was won by the Bonsuna by a margin of half an hour. The two ships left port on the same tide and had a fine journey. The Bonsuna's time was 135 days. Each ship carried 2,000 bags of coffee. Both are wooden vessels, sixteen years old.

WOMAN FIRES FOUR SHOTS AT BURGLAR

Awakened by a burglar trying to gain an entrance to her home through a cellar window, Mrs. Robert Gillespie of No. 6 Glendale avenue, West Somerville, jumped out of bed and, grabbing her revolver, fired four shots at the man. Evidently the man was not injured, as he sped the police, who were called by telephone.

CURTISS MACHINE ARRIVES FOR GREAT ATLANTIC FLIGHTS

HARVARD AVIATION FIELD, Squantum, Sept. 1.—The biplane which Glenn H. Curtiss is to operate in the Harvard meet, arrived on the field to-day and was taken in its heavy box to one of the sections allotted for it in the west hangar.

The Curtiss biplane came in charge of L. A. Blomquist, one of the Curtiss aviators, from Hammondsport, N. Y. Blomquist started to set up the machine, to be ready to turn it over to Curtiss when the latter arrives in person Saturday.

Another aviation arrival to-day on the field was William Hilliard, with a new model B biplane of the Burgess Company & Curtiss concern, which Hilliard is to operate himself.

The model B was assigned to a section in the west hangar, two sections away from the Curtiss camp.

Hilliard at Work.

The moment Mr. Hilliard arrived with the Model B and saw it into the hangar he took off his coat and, assisted by a mechanician, started to uncrate and set it up.

Meanwhile L. A. Blomquist, the Glenn H. Curtiss aviator, was equally active in the Curtiss camp. Blomquist was very enthusiastic about Curtiss and about his latest feat at Cleveland yesterday.

"Glenn H. Curtiss," said Blomquist, "is king of the air. Some of the stunts he will do here will be remarkable. He will arrive Saturday. I cannot say how long he will stay. This is the only machine he will have here and he will be the only one to operate it.

"He goes to Hammond-sport from Cleveland. Then he will come on to Boston Saturday."

Curtiss Born Aviator.

"Aviation is only in its infancy. It is destined to develop rapidly. In a few years it is likely that aeroplanes will be so built that most any can take his seat in one and fly away.

"To operate an aeroplane at present requires a natural gift for it. Mr. Curtiss is a born aviator. To this he adds the skill of experience.

"In a few years aeroplanes will be used to carry the fast mails between cities. The speed shown by Mr. Curtiss at Cleveland was one that took years for railroads to acquire. Yet, when you think of it, how wonderfully short has been the time the aeroplane has had to develop it. Remember, it is only a little over a year since aeroplane flights were put on for public exhibition."

L. A. Blomquist is experimenting now on an aeroplane which shall be able to rise from the water and sail up and away into the air like a seagull or other water bird does.

Rises from the Water.

One idea of this new construction on water machine is to have several of them on a battleship. In times of naval warfare the commander of a ship can have one of these future machines, with an aviator aboard, thrown into the water. The aviator will take the machine up from the water just the way he takes one up now from land. Then he can scout around the battle zone for an enemy, can soar aloft to drop bombs on hostile vessels and can use it in patrolling waters.

Blomquist thinks he has hit on just the mechanical devices necessary to get a "water start" for a machine. He is quite plainly over the plan, though not inclined to talk about his own share of it. When it comes to talking about Glenn H. Curtiss, his principal, about the Curtiss biplane, the Curtiss aeroplane at Hammondsport, N. Y., or about anything else regarding Curtiss and the Curtiss plants, Blomquist will talk till the cows come home. He is a Curtiss to the third degree.

To-day's rain made a sticky mess out of the chopped-up roadway leading to the aviation field, but did no damage to the machine housed in the hangars. Also the Cromwell Dixon gas balloon sheltered in its odd-shaped tent. The coverings of the machine's wings are waterproofed, so that matter, and the canvas of the hangars shed the wet pretty well. So rain did not interfere with getting all the flying machines in a working order.

Willard's Machine Ready.

Charles F. Willard, the Melrose professional, has his Curtiss biplane all set up now. This soon he began installing the motor in the machine. He will be prepared, if weather permitted, to take advantage of the forward of the aviation course, granted him by the contest committee, from four to seven o'clock this afternoon.

Harold de Forest Willard, the Willard Parman biplane will ready at noon, except for putting on the ailerons, or fins, as they are sometimes called, which assist in maintaining the lateral equilibrium of the machine in flight.

With the official opening of the big aviation meet only two days away, "rush" was the watchword at the aviation field to-day, from sun to sun.

This rush begins at the crooked, dusty roadway leading from Atlantic railroad station to the field. Lunch-men, fakirs and others are putting up their booths. The main roadway to the field is a mass of rows lumber, turnstiles, wire fencing and other construction materials. The single-track trolley from field to railroad is as busy as Main with a Waterbury watch, its natural travel being increased by the aviation interests.

Auto Space Applicants.

The parking space for automobiles, between the grandstand and the hangar layout, is being hustled to completion. New applications for auto space have been received from the following: T. M. Mackay, Charles Brodie, Lester Leland, H. E. Slayton, F. H. Ames, H. P. Wasgatt, A. G. Cumnock, H. A. Tucker, J. Wright Gaffney, Curtis Guild, Jr., Charles H. Hastings, H. Parker, C. C. Beer, A. Hemenway, Morton Prince, C. Ford Young, Jr., Heman Sprague, Jr., Frederick Whittington and F. W. Sever. Boxes were reserved by H. N. Noyes, Levi Woodbury, Robert Hemped and Charles S. Pierce.

Samuel P. Perkins, the kite expert, allows to-day that he has it over the wild aeroplane experts so far, as his kites are about the only things which have done any real flying. The disastrous flight of Horace F. Kearny's Pitcher biplane down the mainland, of course.

Mr. Perkins has his string of man-lifting kites ready to send up at the first clearing weather. He already has had a lot of fun with them. So far as he knows, only when went "kite riding." Some went up fifty feet, some seventy-five. Twenty feet off the ground was enough for others.

Carl A. Sylvester, chairman of the reception committee, went up so high that "Jim" Barr yelled: "He'll be carried out over the bay if he isn't careful." But Sylvester came down, right side up with care.

"How do you like kite-riding, Mr. Sylvester?" asked Perkins.

"Bully!" replied Sylvester.

Charles J. Glidden was asked when he would go up with the kites. The veteran aeronaut surveyed the dizzy, swaying string of kites and murmured:

"When they can lift an auto."

No immediate time is set for Mr. Glidden's ascension, a la kite-tail.

Kearny Reinstated.

Horace F. Kearny, driver of the Pitcher monoplane which came to grief yesterday morning when a turn was attempted too near the ground, has been requalified by the contest committee. Kearny was disqualified temporarily because he attempted a flight without getting official sanction. This rule is rigidly enforced by the contest committee, which decided Kearny he could not fly again till his case had been passed upon formally.

Kearny was given a hearing at which it was explained that his neglect was not intentional, but was due to the excitement of trying to get an early flight. The committee granted him permission to attempt a flight to-day. But it is likely that both weather and mechanical conditions will prevent his trying a flight to-day. The Pitcher machine he uses, and which is owned by the Burgess-Herring company, is being carefully repaired from the wreckage of yesterday and may need another day in which to "rest up," as it were.

In connection with the possibility of any world's records being broken at the meet, it is interesting to know that for a record to become a "world's record," it must first be accepted by the national club of the country in which the record is made and then by the International Aeronautic Federation.

The Brooklyn altitude record at Atlantic City was 6162, but it has not yet been made official as there are certain essential items to be made by the surveyors. At that time it was the highest map printed had been.

No official advice has been received of the Drexel record, claimed to be 6,750 feet. Moreover, it has just been learned that Maconey's revised altitude record in France was 5,000 feet instead of 4,165, as at first reported.

Official records to date will be in the hands of the contest committee within a few days in response to a cable request. Whether these records are official or not, Brookins will not be satisfied at the Harvard-Boston meet unless he goes at least higher than 7,000 feet. He has been looking forward to this meet as the place where he would go so high that it will be a long time before anyone can equal it.

GRAHAME-WHITE THOUGHT ORANGE BOMBS WERE USED

When Claude Grahame-White, the leading English aviator, was looking over the list of event and prizes at the carnival here to-day, he pointed to the bomb dropping contest and asked:

"What do you use for bombs? I understand you use oranges over here."

One of the reception committee said:

"They have some sort of a plaster of paris device."

"That's good," replied Grahame-White, "in England we use a small bag of flour. You need to use something which will be sure to make a mark where it strikes. An orange doesn't always stay where it is dropped, nor does it always leave a mark. I think the little cloth bag of flour is as good as anything."

DRIVER HURT AT AVIATION FIELD

The first accident on the Harvard aviation field at Squantum, outside of aeroplane flights, occurred this afternoon when John Williams, truckman, was thrown from his truck as the wheels dipping into a rut. One of his shoulders was dislocated. He was treated at the field and sent to his home on Webster avenue, Somerville.

MANY RALLIES BOOKED.

A rally in the interest of Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, candidate for renomination on the Democratic ticket, will be held to-night at the Vine Street Church, Vine and Dudley streets, Ward 17. Congressman O'Connell and others will speak. The Tammany Club will hold a rally at the same place to-morrow night. Former Councilman Thomas M. Joyce, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in the ward, will hold an open-air rally near the church behind the same time.

Noted British Fliers Who Arrived To-day

To the left is Claude Grahame-White and to the right is A. V. Roe.

Grahame-White, Man-Bird, Eager for Aviation Meet

"I am glad to be here for the meet and am anxious to get into action.

"I shall go into all events.

"I believe I have a chance in all, except the slow lap event. Never did much of that sort of a thing—slow laps.

"I do not care to make any prediction till I know against whom I have to compete."—Claude Grahame-White, English aviator, in interview.

TWO FAMOUS AVIATORS HERE FROM ENGLAND

because it is a well-known principle of aeronautics that the more entering edge there is to the planes the greater the sustaining power. The entering edge is where you get the principal support.

"Unfortunately my engine is of low horsepower and quite heavy. I have, however, made successful flights in a triplane, using there an 60-fashioned nine-horse-power engine."

A few moments after Claude Grahame-White was found standing comparatively alone alongside rail, watching the harbor with lively interest. A reporter answered questions about different planes. When told that the old frigate he saw was the Constitution, Grahame-White said cheerfully: "She's a great craft. If she did lick the Guerriere she's a beauty."

White a Skilful Engineer.

Claude Grahame-White is of different physical type than A. V. Roe. He is nervous energy personified, a tall, slender, alert man with sharp features. He looks about twenty years old, but is over thirty. He is a mechanical engineer of high type, and has been an aviator for but little over a year. He is the man who made the record-breaking aeroplane flight from London to Manchester last Spring against Louis Paulhan, another aeroplanist. Paulhan won, but White covered 115 out of the 186 miles of the trip. He was forced to alight, finally.

"I shall enter in all events," said Grahame-White, "and believe I have a chance in all except the slow lap. I have never done anything in that thing. I won't make any prediction till I know against whom I have to compete."

When told that the Wright Brothers and Glenn Curtiss had entered machines with certain high-power engines, he was keenly interested and let loose a string of questions, asking for mechanical details.

"I shall use a Farman biplane in all events except the speed. In that I shall use the speed events I shall take up a Blériot monoplane."

Mr. White was eager for the latest news from the United England and for a description of the field and the courses.

When the Cymric docked the welcoming party and the aviators and their mechanicians were expedited ashore. Arrangement had been made ahead for all the baggage, biplanes, triplanes and monoplanes to be brought ashore in bond.

Roe's triplane came over all set up on a four-decked lighter, the Cymric's hold, White's Farman and Blériot came "knocked down," as mechanicians say. That is, they are taken apart, boxed and all ready to be brought over and set up speedily by the expert mechanicians. Mr. Roe will have to do to his triplane is to knock the box apart and take the three-decker out.

Professor Martin arranged at the dock for the aeroplanes to be lightered from the Cymric's hold without delay. They were taken down the harbor to Squantum Point without delay on the lighters and unloaded at the aviation field.

With the dust details completed, the entire party left the dock and went to the Touraine for breakfast. It was planned to depart for the field immediately after.

On the voyage over the two aviators were subject of great interest to passengers and officers of the Cymric. So keen an enthusiasm was shown that Grahame-White generously consented, last Tuesday night, to give an informal exhibition of aviation to the officers and saloon passengers. The lecture was heard with eager interest.

HAZZARD IS PLEASED WITH APPEARANCE OF NEW AVIATION FIELD

By HERBERT HAZZARD.
Chief Mechanician of the Wright Brothers.

When a man who is employed by one of the strongest of the firms of the country engaged in making aviation a popular sport, writes anything about the game which is to supersede automobiling as the auto did the bicycle, what he may have to say may be like press agent gossip. So I want to say in writing for the AMERICAN that I hope that whoever reads this will realize that whatever I may say I sincerely believe to be the whole truth.

And so, having pulled the starting lever, let us get right into this new game at the start. First, however, I want to say that I think the Harvard Aeronautical Society has a splendid aviation field. It is large, there is plenty of room for flying, starting and landing, and it would seem to me that the wind conditions should be good.

The arrangements for the care of the men who are to fly seem to be well planned, and I am sure that the Wright fliers will be pleased with Boston and the Harvard field.

Machines Practical and Safe.

And now for the sport itself. The aeroplane business has come to stay. The machines are practical and are safe, provided the proper care is exercised. You will always find men who don't know how to sail a boat, who will put to sea in a leaky boat and with the waves running high. Just so you will find aviators who take chances. But there are men like Mr. Harmon, the Wright brothers, and other drivers in large numbers, who are careful drivers and who have not met with the fatal mishaps which in the conditions under which they have given an impression of the sport.

So I feel that the business is yet young.

In five years I believe the aeroplane business will have the same strength in the business world that the automobile business had ten years ago. I would advise the young man who likes the business to go into it hard, not next year but right now.

In France to-day there is $2,500,000 invested in the business and there are 800 machines. If this is true is France to-day think of how the business will grow in this country when the energy of American capital gets interested in boosting it.

I am a mechanician. I do not like to talk about the machines and their capabilities. Mr. Brookins and Mr. Johnston are the men who show the machines, and they are the men who can truly say what their machines will do.

I hope to see Brookins and Johnston here by to-morrow afternoon. But if the machines do not arrive until Saturday morning we will have them on the field in the afternoon. For, as it happens, we can ship them easily and set them up quickly. And we have the Wright engines so well perfected that we have little, if any, engine trouble.

The two machines to be shown here are not alike. Johnston has a control on the front of the machine, a single plane, used to elevate and depress the flight, working, of course, in conjunction with a similar plane on the rear.

Power Without Weight.

Brookins has no front plane. When he sits in his seat there is nothing to front of him. We have no carburetor on our engines, and of course we thus avoid a lot of trouble. And this, of course, decreases the weight and the head resistance. What every machine now wants of course is greater power without increasing much weight. The aeroplane is not yet too heavily weighted, for the latest dispatches tell of the passage of five passengers in one of them in a flight.

Of course, at Atlantic City, where we showed last, we had the kind the crowd interested because we were the only demonstrators. Here there will be many other machines and the machine will not be seen as often. But as far as I can see the conditions seem to be the same. Brookins will be so far in advance of those which debuted at Atlantic City that some startling exhibitions should be given. I have told Johnston by letter that there is a whole lot of difference between Atlantic City and Atlantic—which is not the best joke in the world, perhaps, but whoever heard of a mechanic who could also write for the papers?

HARMON PRAISES CURTISS'S FEAT

By CLIFFORD B. HARMON.

That was great news about Curtiss in his flight over Lake Erie. I think that Mr. Curtiss is the foremost aviator in America to-day. He's a man who has built his machine and his motor, and then goes up in it and does feats which daily are bringing the sport to its proper position. But in praising Curtiss for his wonderful work we must not forget the daring of the Wright brothers in their great flights and the cleverness shown by other men in perfecting and trying out new methods.

All of which perhaps has little to do with the big meeting which we are to see at the Harvard Aviation field, and in which I imagine every lover of clean sport in Boston is very much interested.

No man likes to write about himself, or, for that matter, talk about his machines and his work. But every man who flies is out for earnest, and Boston will see some great work. I would like to stay for the whole meet. It would be worth it, every minute. But I had given a promise to friends in St. Louis, and they want me to bring my machine out there to help out in giving a little show they are giving.

There will probably be some changes made in some of the smaller details of the racing plans and the rules and conditions, but it will make the meet all the more safe and the aviators will work harder to please.

I hope and have reason to believe that some exhibitions will be made in the scoring arrangement of the battleship bomb throwing contest, and if the new plan suggested goes through, we are to see a most exciting time watching the scores of the various ones creep up.

I believe that the battleship will be outlined on the ground and the surface blocked off into squares, a hit on each square counting a certain number of points, of course the squares nearest the funnels will count the highest, the funnels counting as bullseyes.

FREE MONTH'S TREATMENT
A man is never dead until he's buried. This should be remembered by those who, through inheritance or error, now suffer the torments of the damned. Your body may be one mass of sores, your skin may have reached the stage where it is peeling off in strips, your gums may be so diseased that the teeth are sticking; your hair may be falling out in handfuls, and YET, THAT IS NO REASON why you should give up all hope of being a REAL LIVE man, or woman. We have offices in Boston fitted up especially to handle these serious cases. We have several expert physicians who have always wonderful results in many cases. WE KNOW HOW THESE MEDICINES SHOULD BE USED. We can't begin to cure all these cases that come to us. That would be supernatural. And still we are willing and anxious to examine all in need of treatment and tell them honestly, without cost, just what we think can be done for them. Then if we decide we can do something for you WE WILL TAKE YOUR CASE, put you under a SPECIAL HOME TREATMENT of a few months, and give you ONE MONTH'S TREATMENT FREE. No man or woman will hesitate to write or call on us. The possible chance—no matter how small—should be at once grasped by you. DETECTIVES TO SOLVE RICH MAN'S DEATH OFF THE STEAMER YALE

Believing that John H. Bangs, one of the proprietors of the White Plains (N. Y.) Daily Record, was robbed and hurled to his death from the Yale on his way from New York on Sunday to visit his brother-in-law, Elliott Perkins, of Danvers, detectives have been engaged to trace the movements of the man since he left his home last Thursday to take a two weeks' vacation.

It is believed that Bangs was thrown from the boat off Point Judith because of the fact that his watch was found to be stopped at 1:25 a. m. At that time the Yale was off Point Judith, the roughest point of the passage between New York and Boston.

The friends of the man, whose body was found in Long Island Sound on Monday afternoon, say that he certainly met with foul play. The first reason is that he had no cause in the world for killing himself, and, second, whereas he started from home with between $300 and $400 in his pocket, only $2.46 was found in his clothing when the body was picked up.

Happy in His Home Life.

Mr. Bangs, one of the best-known men in Westchester County, lived with his wife and two children in a pretty cottage at Colonial place, New Rochelle, where

MIDDLEBORO CHILD WHO IS CANDIDATE FOR BEAUTY QUEEN

AGATHA FULLER

The youngest child was born only two weeks ago. His home life was happy, and so far as is known he had no business or other cares.

For several weeks Mr. Bangs had been planning to go on a vacation. He had worked hard all summer. Last Thursday morning he left home telling his wife he would be gone about two weeks and that she would hear from him soon.

He went to his office, in White Plains, where he discussed business matters with his partner, William C. Pells, then boarded a train for this city, saying he would probably go to Atlantic City first.

Last Saturday morning Mr. Bangs received a postcard from her husband. It had been mailed at 6 p. m. the day before at Atlantic City. He wrote that he was in good health and enjoying his vacation. Three men in his White Plains office also received postcards from him that day.

Told Wife of Trip.

Saturday morning he called Mr. Pells on the long distance telephone from Atlantic City and told him he intended going to visit his brother-in-law. Before leaving home Mr. Bangs had told his wife he might take a trip to Boston.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Bangs boarded the steamer Yale at the foot of Beekor street. He was assigned to stateroom No. 75. He wore a straw hat when he went aboard and carried a suit case.

After all the passengers had been landed in Boston the stateroom occupied by Mr. Bangs was found locked. In it were found the suitcase and the straw hat. Nobody on the boat could tell what had become of the passenger.

The suitcase was sent back to New York, where it was examined. It contained Mr. Bangs's effects, but nothing that would throw light on the mystery.

Yesterday an inquest was held at Greenport, L. I. The verdict was that Mr. Bangs had met death by falling overboard from a steamer.

It has been suggested that he might have been followed aboard the Yale by men who had learned he carried a large sum of money, that they robbed him after the steamer left New York and threw him overboard.

BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Not to be outdone by the surrounding cities and towns, Middleboro has come forward claiming the crown of beauty for one of its fair daughters. Middleboro is so sure that the beauty queen dwells within its limit that it challenges all previous claimants to a competition, not excepting Millicent Gowen, the original claimant, herself. Controversy has not run so high since the days when "Dakota Dan" tried to prove that he was Daniel Russell.

The new "handsomest child" is Agatha Fuller of No. 9 Pearl street, Middleboro, and her backers are willing to stand the test against Everett, Lynn, Dorchester and all other aspirants.

"We claim this child to be the equal of the Gowen child or any other, and are ready to put her side by side with anybarring none," writes the Middleboro enthusiast. "Agatha Fuller is but six years old, in perfect health and never had a sick day in her life.

"We are ready for competition. She has lovely hair and perfect features. She is the daughter of A. W. Fuller."

REBELS AGAIN ON RAMPAGE IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, Sept. 1.—An uprising against the government is reported in the province of Nueva Vizcaya.

A constabulary force is hurrying to the scene and a battle is expected hourly.

The rebel movement is headed by Simeon Mandac, former Governor of the province of Ilocos Norte, who has long been a fugitive from justice.

Mandac occupies Solano, a town of about 6000 inhabitants, northwest of the centre of Nueva Vizcaya, almost five miles north of Bayombong, the telegraph wires north of Bayombong have been cut, and it is impossible to learn the number of Mandac's followers. It is doubted, however, if the rising is serious.

Colonel Taylor, at the head of the constabulary at Bayombong, is preparing for an attack and the constabulary forces from other points are moving toward Solano, with the purpose of surrounding the outlaws and making certain their capture or death. Government reinforcements are available should they be needed.

Word of the trouble reached Manila today. Mandac, while Governor, subjected a prisoner to a "third degree" examination of such severity that the man died. The prisoner was convicted of homicide and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment.

He appealed from the verdict of the court and while the appeal was pending he jumped his bond and had been missing for several months. It was thought that he had escaped abroad, until today, when an official dispatch announced that he had turned up at the head of a band of malcontents. Nueva Vizcaya is the central province of Luzon, and Bayombong is its capital.

O'MEARA MUM ABOUT RUNNING FOR CONGRESS

Police Commissioner O'Meara would not say today whether or not he is a candidate in the Eleventh district for nomination on the Republican ticket for Congress. It was expected that a statement would be made today about it.

The police headquarters newspaper men trooped into see the Commissioner, as is their daily custom. The Commissioner sat at his desk. He looked up.

"Good morning, Commissioner," said the reporters.

A Cheerful Greeting.

"Good morning, boys," replied Mr. O'Meara, "what can do for you today?"

"How about your candidacy for Congress?" the spokesman of the visitors queried.

The commissioner shifted around in his chair. He eyed the reporters for a couple of moments. He shrugged his shoulders. He lapsed back with one hand gently. Then he said:

"I have nothing to say on that matter whatever."

Absolutely Nothing Doing.

"Will you affirm or deny that you are a candidate?"

"Well, no—no."

After a short pause the commissioner added:

"If I were a private citizen it would be different. In this position I cannot say anything."

The commissioner waltzed about and resumed his work. The reporters quietly left.

NEEDHAM WILL NOT VOTE FOR CANNON

FRESNO, Cal., Sept. 1.—Congressman J. C. Needham, in a letter to Chairman H. H. Harris of the congressional committee, announces that in the event of his re-election he will not vote for Speaker Cannon for Speaker of the House. "I have no personal feeling against Speaker Cannon," said Mr. Needham, "but I sincerely believe that it is to the best interest of the Republicans that a change in the speakership be made."

PRETTY GIRL BRAVES DEATH TO SAVE CHUM

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Elise Shearman, the seventeen-year-old daughter of L. H. Shearman, vice-president and director of the W. R. Grace Company, with a residence on Riverside drive, owes her life to the prowess of Margaret Sumner, her school girl chum, as a swimmer.

Margaret is the daughter of attorney Edward A. Sumner, a lawyer, and an enthusiastic yachtsman. It was near his yacht Khora, a quarter of a mile off shore in front of the Huntington Yacht Club, at Huntington, L. I., that Miss Sumner made the thrilling rescue which saved her friend.

Both girls are about the same age, and students at the Hawthorne private school. In stepping aboard a yacht Miss Shearman missed her footing and fell into the water. The ebb tide, then running swiftly, swept her away from the boat.

Without waiting to remove any of her garments Miss Sumner, who is an excellent swimmer, plunged in the wake.

"Throw in a life ring," she shouted to her mother on board the yacht as she dived toward her school friend. A sharp pull of two hundred feet brought her to the side of Miss Shearman. The drowning girl was still conscious, and retained sufficient presence of mind to obey her rescuer.

Miss Sumner grasped the back of the waist worn by Miss Shearman and started to swim with her toward the yacht. She struggled bravely and managed to drag her friend to a life ring that had been hurled toward them by Miss Sumner. Then the girls, both exhausted from their efforts were drawn up on the yacht.

FITZGERALD MAY GET BOSTON DELEGATES

The fact that only one pledged ward delegation for the State Convention has been filed caused the freely expressed belief at the Democratic city headquarters to-day that Mayor Fitzgerald will receive the almost unanimous support of the Boston Democrats for Governor. Ward 13 filed the only pledged delegation for James H. Vahey. The delegation was headed by James H. Furlong, representing the minority faction of the ward. The opening of the papers filed for the State primaries showed that there will be few contests except those in the congressional and councilloe districts. Ward 7 filed an odd delegation pledged to Arthur D. Hill for district attorney. Pelletier had pledged delegations in every ward in the city.

MAN'S BODY FOUND ON RAILROAD TRACK

NEWBURY, Sept. 1.—The body of a man was found near the tracks of the Boston & Maine railroad early to-day. From the appearance of his clothing the police believe that he was a tramp, who fell from a freight train while stealing a ride. He was a heavy man with black hair and dark clothes.

TWO WOMEN SAVED IN FIRE IN ROXBURY

A terrific hot air explosion blew out the windows of the grocery store of Arthur Sampson at No. 97 Windsor street, Roxbury, and started a conflagration that, while it was confined to the store, caused a loss of more than $500, early to-day. Two women, who were asleep in an apartment above, were endangered by the flames, but were rescued by neighbors, who rushed up through the smoke and carried them safely to the street.

The noise of the explosion could be heard for blocks, and several houses in the vicinity shook and trembled from the force of the concussion. Window panes were shattered, and the contents of the windows of the grocery store were hurled across the street, striking the walls of the houses on the opposite side.

Grocery Store Wrecked.

For yards in the vicinity of the store the street was littered with debris, and the interior of the grocery store was wrecked by the explosion.

The building is a one-and-a-half story wooden structure, with the dwelling set back from the street. The front of the building is occupied by the grocery store, and Miss Rina Rose and Miss Rita Maless, who were asleep in the apartment upstairs, had a narrow escape. ey were not awakened by the explosion, the noise of which aroused the neighborhood for blocks, and were in danger of being suffocated, when Mrs. John Maless, mother of Rita, who lives at No. 72 Windsor street, remembered that her daughter was asleep on the second floor. Several men rushed up the stairs through the smoke and carried the two women to the street. They were cared for in the home of Mrs. Maless.

Ladderman Hurt.

An alarm was sounded, and by the time the firemen arrived the fire had gained great headway. The explosion had scattered the fire in all directions, and it was rapidly eating its way into the apartments above the rest of the store. A brisk fire was burning in the ceiling of the store, and Ladderman Joseph A. Wall of No. 1563B Tremont street, Roxbury, was struck over the eye by a heavy piece of timber while he was trying to extinguish the fire there. He was taken to the City Hospital in an automobile, where it was found some plaster had imbedded itself in his eye, and he may lose the sight of that optic.

The fire was confined to the building in which it started. The store was burned out and the apartments overhead were somewhat damaged. The damage is estimated at more than $500. It is not known what caused the explosion.

MISS TAUSSIG IS A NEWPORT BRIDE

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 1.—The exclusive "Church Hill" cottagers are in force at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at St. Matthew's Church for the wedding of Miss Madeline Taussig, daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Taussig of St. Louis, and Thomas B. McTheeters, Jr., also of St. Louis. The Rev. Dr. Parsons performed the ceremony. Miss Jessica Bishop of Pittsfield, Mass., was the only attendant, and the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Reginald W. Taussig of St. Louis. Samuel B. McTheeters of St. Louis, a cousin of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were Knox Taussig, brother of the bride; George Brownlee and William Taussig of St. Louis, and Corcoran Nicol, Edgar Patterson and Norman Bonsall of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Grant Walker of Boston were among the wedding guests.

HOODLUMS WRECK A CANDY FACTORY

The police are searching for the gang of hoodlums who broke into the candy factory of Edgar P. Lewis and did $500 damage. While nothing was stolen, the stock and fixtures were badly used. "Pure cussedness" was the only motive, Mr. Lewis says. The gang entered by a fire escape in the fourth floor and made their way to the office below. They pried open a safe in a rear room, overturned it and broke the hinges. Then they procured tools from the boiler room and tried to open the safe, but failed. Not satisfied with that they rifled drawers, overturned the furniture and strewed the finished stock and raw material everywhere.

SOLD DRINKS IN BARN AND IS FINED $50

Because he invited men into a barn near the Rockville race track yesterday and sold them drinks of whiskey out of a bottle he had in his possession, Eugene H. Daniels, who said he lived in Hartford, Ct., was fined $50 by Judge Hutchinson in the Dedham District Court to-day. Lieutenant Edward E. Welsh of the Dedham police told the court that he saw Daniels pass the bottle to eight men and receive money from them.

WAYLAND, Sept. 1.—Martin Sperry, chauffeur for P. M. Hamlin of this town, was seriously hurt in an automobile accident here.

Sperry was driving along the State road at a fair speed, when the steering gear became clogged and he was unable to control the machine. He was thrown against a bank and suffered a fracture of the ribs and bruises about the head and legs. He was taken to the Waltham Hospital.

The New Telephone Rates
Bulletin No. 1

WE have accepted the recommendations of the Massachusetts Highway Commission relative to rates and service in the Boston and Suburban Districts and will make them effective as soon as practicable.

It is impossible at this time, because of the extensive preparation required, to fix a date for the complete application of the new schedule in all parts of the territory, but BY NOVEMBER 1 we expect to be able to offer service under the provisions of this schedule to those who desire it.

New subscribers desiring immediate service will be taken subject to present rates until facilities for operation under the new schedule are supplied, at which time, after due notice, they will be transferred to the new schedule.

In some of our exchanges these facilities can be furnished within a few weeks; in others it will be a matter of months.

It is our desire to apply these new rates without unnecessary delay and to give them a complete and impartial trial.

The rewriting of upwards of one hundred thousand contracts, the rearrangement of subscribers' lines and numbers to conform thereto, the reconstruction of switchboards and the building of the thousands of additional lines required, is a large task and one to be carried out under careful plans providing both for the doing of the work and for the least possible disturbance of the service.

We ask the indulgence of our subscribers, therefore, while planning and executing these changes. Before inviting their acceptance of this new schedule we shall issue a series of bulletins giving the fullest publicity to the various rates quoted and such explanation as may seem necessary to a clear understanding of them. We shall also supply such detailed information or advice as they may request regarding their individual telephone requirements, in order that they may select the particular class of service best suited to their needs.

The following recapitulation may anticipate many inquiries:

1. We expect by November 1 to be able to offer service in any exchange, in accordance with the new schedule, to those who desire it.

2. The changes necessary for complete operation under the new schedule cannot be made for several months.

3. Until the Company can furnish service under the new schedule, present rates may be retained by those having existing contracts thereunder. Before any change in schedules is made, due notice will be given.

POPE AGAIN PUTS BAN ON MODERNISM

ROME, Sept. 1.—The Pope, in receiving Signor Gentiloni, president of the Catholic Electoral Union, insisted upon the part of modernism in all countries and under all forms.

The pontiff said he had displayed the greatest toleration in the matter of the Sillonists, condemning the society only after repeated complaints on the part of the French episcopate, which had declared their doctrines contained errors common to all workers for Christian democracy, by false interpretation of the precepts of Pope Leo XIII.

A despatch from Paris said:

Marc Sangier, the head of the French Catholic Sillon Society, the dissolution and reorganization of which was ordered by the Pope, has written a letter of complete submission to His Holiness, saying that the work for popular education of the 500 branches will be turned over to the episcopate.

Sangier adds, however, that he regrets the decision of the Vatican, as it gives the impression that the church is opposed to democracy and announces that he will personally continue a democratic propaganda.

ENGINEERS' PAY RAISED.

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 1.—Increased wages and reduced working hours went into effect for all engineers on the Ann Arbor railroad to-day.

SAYS BOSTON FOLKS HAVE KINDLY EYES

I like your Boston and I like its people. I took a walk down Washington street and I did what I like to do in every city that I visit. I looked into the eyes of the people as they passed. Boston people have kindly eyes as a rule and they show kind hearts. Do you know, I am a strong believer in physiognomy as an exact science, and I think if you observe a person's eye, his chin and his mouth, you can form a very correct idea of just what sort of a person he is.—Colonel John Pollen, visiting English Esperantist.

MEN REFUSE STRIKE HELP

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 1.—The strike situation between the contractors and the carpenters and bricklayers of this city remains unchanged. The contractors still continue their work with non-union help. Yesterday Deminic d'Alessandro received $4,000 from the International Union. All of the married men received $1 and were promised a similar amount each day during the strike. The single men refused to accept any money stating that they were satisfied to get three meals each day. "We are going to win this fight," said Mr. d'Alessandro to-day. "And we are going to win by peaceful means. The present help employed by the contractors is not good and in a short while they will have to come to me."

JAIL CORPORATION DUMMIES, SAYS WILSON

You will say that in many instances it is not fair to pick out for punishment the particular officer who ordered a thing done, because he really had no freedom in the matter, that he is himself under orders, is a dummy manipulated from without. I reply that society should permit no man to carry out orders which are against law and public policy, and that, if you will put one or two conspicuous dummies in the penitentiary, there will be no more dummies for hire. —President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton, on Corporations before American Bar Association.

PATROLMAN AIDS 'BURGLAR'

It is seldom if ever that a patrolman is called upon to assist a burglar in getting into a house, but that is what fell to the lot of one bluecoat attached to the Joy street station early to-day.

Police headquarters was startled when a woman shouted over the telephone that a man was trying to break into her house on Hancock street, West End, and asked to have a policeman sent over immediately. Three minutes later the call was repeated and she was told there was an officer on his way to the house. Two more minutes passed and a third time the woman called headquarters on the phone, and said that the man had got into the house.

Explanations were in order and Captain Garland called the Joy street station to find out what had become of the officer. It developed the "burglar" was a lodger and was without his latch key. The sister of the landlady was keeping house and she had not recognized him as one of the lodgers. When he attempted to force his way into the house she became scared and telephoned for the police.

"RATS" AND "PUFFS"

Prevailing Hair Styles Cause Many Scalp Diseases.

Women who cover their heads with masses of false hair and fibre should understand that it is only a question of time until their scalps become diseased. Rats and puffs are denounced by doctors as "unhygienic dust and germ catchers." The air is excluded from the scalp, and the pressure on the delicate network of veins soon results in the loss of hair. Girls and women should clean their hair frequently with Birt's Head Wash to overcome the injury caused by "being in style." This is a delicately perfumed antiseptic shampoo made of neutral soap, glycerin, white of eggs, cocoanut oil and salicylic acid. It gives a gloss and sheen to the hair that nothing else will, and restores the scalp to a pink, soft, healthy condition, removing every trace of dandruff or scales, 25c and 50c.

NOTED TRAINERS TELL OF MAKING FAMOUS HORSES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

SPEED BOYS HAVE TO BOW TO ED WALSH

TWO FAMOUS HORSES AT READVILLE WON BY TRAINERS' METHODS

There are many famous race horses shown me a world's record was easy for her. There has been a good deal printed as to what my expectations in the Lexington race were, but the truth is I had figured it out that Native Belle ought to go a mile in 2:06, which would beat the Aries record of 2:06¾, made in a single dash against the watch. You know what happened—a mile in 2:07¾, the middle half in 1:02, and I want to say right here that Native Belle never has been as fast a mile in as she can go in a race. She would trot in 2:06 if prepared for a single mile against time."

Geers Tells of The Harvester.

Regarding the training of The Harvester by Ed. Geers, the article says:

"After the 2:12 mile at Boston the stable went to Hartford, and there the final schooling was given for a few days later, during the New York State Fair at Syracuse, the colt's first race was billed, and from what the other three-year-old trotters had shown there I myself thought he had a mighty fine colt to win. So the Hartford trial was a hard one, other fast horses being detailed to go with The Harvester, and in general the atmosphere of a real race was provided. Their heats were on the program. The first was in 2:36, the second in 2:25, and then came the real test. The colt won, and he go two successive miles faster than he ever had trotted before, the first being accomplished in 2:11¾, 2:11¾. From the way The Harvester stepped through the home stretch in the final heat Geers knew he had a 2:10 trotter on his hands, and the race ended the preparation.

"When the colt appeared for the word for the race at Syracuse he was a model of deportment and a whirlwind of speed. The first half was in 1:04¾, followed of his opponents, and in spots he showed two minute speed. Then was the Grand Circuit. Ohio, where he astonished horsemen by getting a first quarter in 30 seconds, and then to Lexington, Ky., where the most important race of all, the Kentucky futurity, was almost within his grasp. Then was set for the decision an old-fashioned "three-heat" affair that feels stamina as well as speed.

Scored Another Victory.

"And again The Harvester won, trotting his final mile in 2:08¾, and ending the most remarkable campaign ever made by a three-year-old trotter. Lineaten and unbeatable, all the records were his, all the glory and all the money. And the figure of the achievement was a wonderful speed mark for the aligned three-year-old trotter. Geers, the good natured, sphinx like Yankee trainer, had driven an individual colt with bad manners to March and made him a champion three-year-old trotter."

Ed Wills, the colored man who trained Miss Stokes with such skill that on her first attempt she lowered the world's record from 2:25, made six years ago, to 2:19¾, talked very modestly about his stupendous achievement. He said:

"Why, I just looked at the amount how that mile ought to be driven based on what the filly had shown me and it was there. I would take her the first three quarters of the mile as fast as I thought she could. Then, if she felt good on the lines, I would try to maintain the clip for another eighth. After that I was going to let her out. The filly did all that I thought she would do all she could. And the plan was right."

The end of the trial I logged Miss Stokes to a mile, and then drove her a mile in 2:10. Then I hopped her around the track and went a second mile. That was in 2:08. After that I knew that I had been wiped off my cane not for the good of the colt, so I hopped her a third mile and then at 2:20 speed, after which we turned for home. That was enough."

Gentleness the Best Way.

The speed schedule I had made worked all right, as the official time of the first mile showed. I, and of the last mile, 1:08¾. I never touched the filly with the whip, and did not even cluck to her until the last eighth was reached. It was from time to that point was all right for best. The 2:20, when one has to drive to shoot at, and thought a little encouragement would help matters.

"I cannot say that Miss Stokes has any particular fondness for me, owing to the fact that she insists on jogging at every chance, sometimes nibbling and sometimes trotting. Also she has a habit of which she wants to carry her head while jogging, and I don't like it. But I have found her at hand she seems to know it and will let me take her head up a bit. She is going to speak of. I tried it once, but she shook her head at me.

"You must let a colt have its way about a lot of little things if you expect to have my success. They are like children. Work is worse than punishment. Rough work is worse than punishment.

KID COTTON REJECTS JOHNSON'S OFFER

The distinction of traveling around with the champion and acting as his sparring partner, to say nothing of the fat financial returns, would appeal irresistibly to the average fighter, but not Kid Cotton is one who will not permit such a bait to lure him from the chase for real ring glory.

Champion Johnson offered Cotton a good salary asking Cotton to join him on the road at which all accompanies him during the rest of his theatrical engagements. However, but Cotton turned down the proposition without a moment's hesitation. He says he prefers to get down to real fighting at once.

Cotton has received a number of good offers of theatrical engagements, but he is in charge predict that he will be one of the champions of the coming ring season from evidence he has given at the National Athletic Club of New York, is eager to get Cotton for one of his coming shows, and it is probable that the clever colored boy's wish will appear there.

O'Rourke may match him against the winner of the bout between Morgy Harris and Big Tom Overby.

MAYOR IS TO START THE TEN-MILE RACE

It was announced at a meeting of the Associated Order of Scottish Clans that Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will in all probability be the starter of the ten-mile race of the union picnic of the organization, which is to be held next Monday, Labor Day, at Columbia Grove. The race is looked forward to with decided interest as the twenty or more men who are to go into it are all well known distance runners with clever performances to the past.

It would seem that the first prize money of $150 would be hard fought for, with Swanburg, Prime, Homer, Wood and Crook of Fall River all feel equal to carrying away with the first money and unless some dark horse jumps out of the bushes it is likely one of these half dozen will break the string.

AMATEUR TEAMS BATTLE.

A battle royal is expected Saturday when the Notre Dames of Roxbury and the Romar A. C. clash in the third game of the series to decide the amateur championship of Roxbury. To date both of these teams have each one a victory to their credit, and that the result of Saturday's game, which will be played at the Marcella street playgrounds, will decide the title.

SAID THE JUDGE TO BUNK.
WHERE ARE YOUR KIDS?
I HOPE TO CROAK JUDGE IF I KNOW WHERE THEY ARE
MRS P. ALOYSIOUS BUNK SUDDENLY CAME BACK TO LIFE YESTERDAY WITH A SUIT FOR DIVORCE. SHE WANTED TO KNOW WHERE HER CHILDREN WERE AND HAD MR. BUNK PULLED UP ON THE STAND TO GIVE UP THE DESIRED INFO OR GO TO JAIL.
THE JUDGE GAVE BUNK A HEART TO HEART TALK AND WISED HIM UP ON DIFFERENT THINGS BUT BUNK WOULDNT TELL WHERE THE KIDS WERE.
HE TOLD THE JUDGE THAT HE KNEW AS MUCH ABOUT THE KIDS AS THE KING OF SWEDEN KNEW CONCERNING THE WHEREABOUTS OF DOCTOR LUCK. "IF THOSE MUTTS ARE NOT HERE BY MONDAY YOU GO IN THE COOP" SAID THE JUDGE

$60,000 OFFER TURNED DOWN FOR COLORADO E.

The regard and the sentiment of a business man from out of the ordinary have been well, and been ever faithful to the trust reposed, and the sudden illness of his father advised Mr. Bradley, one of the most astute horsemen this country has ever developed, prevented last evening the consummation of one of the greatest horse deals that has ever been known, and the fact that Colorado E., 2:06¾, the world's champion three-year-old trotter, owned by George H. Estabrook of Denver, Col., has not a new owner at a sale price of $60,000 to-day.

It was a most singular combination of circumstances that prevented the sale of the peerless son of The Bondsman that Wm. McGregor, by Jay McGregor, to William G. Bradley, the owner of Ardmore Farm, Raritan, N. J., after Colorado E. had broken the world's record for three-year-old trotters by stepping a mile in 2:06¾, and then with a second trial 2:07¾, established a second world's record for two consecutive heats by a three-year-old trotter.

When the sale of Colorado E. was submitted to Mr. Estabrook, the owner, at a sale price which was $50,000 the West seemed to be a great surprise as a stipulation of any transfer of his great futurity trotter, that Ike Macey, the well known horseman from Lexington, Ky., and trainer and driver of the Estabrook stable, should be retained as the driver of Colorado E. In all the ten starts for which the half and quarter of The Bondsman had been entered.

"No man shall draw a rein over Colorado E. but Macey," said Mr. Estabrook and his word has been as good as his bond.

Purchaser Double Crossed.

It mattered not one iota to the western owner that his demand might mean the failure of the sale of Colorado E., and the receipt of a certified check for $60,000. He was faithful to the gray haired Kentuckian who had served him well, and the fortunes of Colorado E. and the fact that the greatest sum of money ever offered for a 3-year old was being held in abeyance, was a matter of the slightest concern to Mr. Estabrook.

This situation is without a parallel. The master of Ardmore Farm, came into the market as a buyer for Colorado E. The man who has served as his adviser has been Robert McGuire, one of the best judges of men that Gotham has ever developed. This man was certain early knight that the colt Colorado E. was certain to lower the mark of General Watts, 2:04¼, as the first champion three-year-old trotter, and that after accomplishing this he could be sold for 1907, the West Virginia stallion, owned by Hendrick B. Duryea, the first world's champion trotting stud, where his service fee was $500, and that he had no racing engagements but his earning the title as champion three-year-old trotter three years ago. And he urged the purchase. And for Colorado E. to R-ston with an AMERICAN representative. The result was a decided surprise to me, for I knew that my horse would achieve the title of champion because I have placed Colorado E. in the market, and entertained bids for him, but I thought I will not consider it nor intention to in any way take measures that would reflect upon the fine horse and his reputation. I will sell it I get my market price. And for Colorado E. I have no stock farm, where Colorado E. can be established in stud, and the record that he deserves as a sire, and for this reason nothing but the offer I am willing to sell the champion."

Could Afford to Buy Horse.

Mr. Estabrook said he conducted the largest wholesale grocery business west of Chicago, and is a director of the Northern Coal and Coke Company and in the Colorado National Bank, and is one of the most successful operators in Denver real estate. The proposition will be completed at first opportunity to so sell as to purchase Colorado E. In the event of the sale of Colorado E. to Estabrook has no desire to sell as a purely commercial transaction, but only to establish Colorado E. as some stock farm of international reputation, and where he might have opportunity to secure his just deserts as a sire.

BRESNAHAN IS BALKED TRYING TO BOLSTER

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 1.—Manager Roger Bresnahan of the Cardinals is fully appreciative the fact that it is almost an impossibility to dig up a minor league pitcher who is able to jump right in and buffet the big league teams, and is digging up every young twirler who looks as though he will develop. The Duke needs pitchers and needs them badly. He has already announced the purchase of some half dozen young slabmen and is eager to have them report immediately.

In this connection he is meeting some slight setback. Invariably the best young talent is found with the best teams and the clubs that are well up in the pennant race don't like to weaken their nine long enough for the season ends or before the race is decided.

Roger always maintains that it is expecting a good deal of any young ball player to ask that he jump in and make an instantaneous hit with the big fellows. However, it is necessary for him to start and be tried at the same time.

If Roger is able to try out his squad of new pitchers during the last month or six weeks of the present season, it will give him a good line on the men with whom he is to work next year. It should also be a big advantage, too, for the newcomers to accustom themselves to big league baseball. It will help them a lot if they have a chance in them for work next season.

Bresnahan's pitching staff was a bigger failure than was ever anticipated. But he is a fighter and a leather lunger and has turned in an effort to strengthen his club, to this respect it might be said that Owner Robinson's pocketbook is at his disposal. Roger wants a slabman, and if hard work will result in one he's sure to have it.

The pitching end of the team is not the only department that needs bolstering. The failure of Ellis, Oakes and Evans to hit up to their 1909 marks has surprised even more than the cracking of the pitching staff. It is probable that the Cardinals' squad on the 1911 training trip will include a goodly portion of fly chasers.

Better than 250 batting marks are expected of the men who operate on the grass portion of the field. Inability to hit the veteran Bob Ewing as well as the failure of Lester Backman to find the brownsville hitters caused the downfall of Kenry, Hoggins & Co.

BASE RUNNING MAKES TEAM

Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, declares that plenty of base stealing or attempts to steal will bring a world's championship. He developed his plans as follows: "The base running thing is bound to win, and I'm going to keep the ball rolling. I've got a fast team good. Bet the other fellows throwing and run out on a lot of plays with them. Of course, there are times when discretion is the better part of valor, but indiscriminate bonehead base stealing when Kling or Archer has a good start is different. Let's even Rossner too often to be outguessed.

"But I'm not going to do the pitchers and it pays to keep 'em throwing. This is the present status of the game. Baseball as it is now running has been so subordinated of recent years that the individual star has come to the front at the cost of fast men, plunging at them all the time. Fast.

"They don't know what to do when man after man steals on them. They are so batted around, comes charging down the line with the throw unwieldy. Then others take the throw and grope around like a lot of chickens. All the time if you only have a little nerve. The spiking of infielders is largely the result of their uncertainty and clumsiness.

"In the old days, when we were steadily stealing bases, the basemen were clever as cats and real wonders, both at touching the runner and getting off a throw.

SHARPSHOOTERS AT SEA GIRT TRAP

SEA GIRT, N. J., Sept. 1—The flower of the military rifle corps of several States of the country, with many civilian target experts, will open a week's shooting to-days of the twenty-sixth annual Sea Girt shooting tournament, which lasts ten days. Matches with New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania associations are included in the programme.

A large portion of the rifle men now here are from the Second Brigade of New Jersey, Gen. Perry, O., where they participated in the national matches during the last three weeks.

POWER BOAT TITLE GOES TO EMERSON

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 1—The Emerson, a twenty-six foot boat owned by A. H. Transue of Poughkeepsie, won the championship of the Mississippi River Power Boat Association to-day, taking the cup and $250 prize.

In the twenty-six-foot class, the Comet clipped several seconds from the world record, established by her yesterday, covering five miles in 9:06. This record is the second made in competition by a twenty-foot displacement boat.

POLICE STOP BOXING BOUTS

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 1—In one of the preliminaries to the Morgan-Dillon bout the police appeared and stopped the proceedings, principals and seconds.

Sunday boxing bouts have been permitted and the Mitchell Club held it privately, but by making the ring side charge admission they will be pulled off before the Muncie Club at Muncie in two weeks.

RED SOX GIVE BIG ED WALSH HERD OF GOATS

BY SID WHIPPLE.

Now is the time when every man will get out his little hammer and join the anvil chorus, but it's up to everybody to come and think a minute before starting into nail the Red Sox for what they did, or rather for what they did not do, in yesterday's slaughter. Admitting that Boston was beaten yesterday, and beaten in a most exasperating way, what have you got to kick about?

The Speed Boys have had one of the best home games, and dropped the last one because they couldn't do anything with big Ed Walsh's pitching. Some of the men are tired out, it might be added, with the strenuous work of the last few days. So just look up your little excuse book, get out a little chart, and find some excuses, for the boys deserve it.

But a word of appreciation must be spoken for the way Ed Walsh handed the big, round zeros to Boston. The boys hit him at times, to be sure, and it was far from a no-hit game. But he fanned Shiki three times, Purtell twice, Lewis twice, Speaker twice, Carrigan and Smith once apiece, and that was going some. This Speaker was high man in the batting line, with two hits for a total of three bases, and only one man was seen downstairs.

Clyde Engle helped to pull off two double plays in almost identically the same way, in the third inning he mulled a hard line drive, which was forwarded by Zeider's bat, and doubled Dougherty at first as that worthy individual had strayed too far from headquarters to return. In the eighth inning Mr. Engle picked Sullivan's grounder and shot it to Wagner in the same predicament as his team mate and been

Frank Smith did not show up well against Ed Walsh. It might not have been Smith's fault that the two second and third runs were mistakes, and due to Carrigan's passed ball and error, nothing that Smith could have helped. It was one of the misfortunes of the game. The fourth run was caused by Wagner's error when Lord hit to him for a single. His third frame allowed Lord to get to second, and Melonn's hit drove him in for the tally.

Those same people who always leave the ground about the seventh inning if the home team is behind the game, were out in force yesterday to see Speaker start. One of them did their usual walking stunt when Purtell hit drove home two runs, in the eighth.

The new Texan pitcher, whose name is something like Sandfield, wandered into the ground to-day for the game started, but put on a rather faded looking Red Sox uniform. He showed in his pitches, but then had stage fright, and disappeared from the confines of the club house. In fact so bashful was he, that nobody could find him after the game, so it is to be feared that the fans won't know much about him until Labor Day.

Everybody interested in Herry Lord's batting and fielding. Harry did a good job. He faced the pitcher five times, made two hits, scored a run, handled a fair infield once, and filled out twice. He also pulled off a neat sacrifice, and Manager McConnell got his usual hit, and was credited with a run batted in.

CHANNEL SWIM FAILS.

DOVER, Eng., Sept. 1.—After battling the tides and currents of the English Channel for three hours and fifteen minutes in a race from Dover to Calais, Edward Meyer of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave up the attempt. He had intended to race the Dutch champion, Henry Sietas. Meyer started at 11.45, giving up at 3 P. M.

M. F. A. TO HOLD MEETING.

The first meeting of the season of the Massachusetts Football Association will take place Saturday evening at Young's Hotel, at 8 o'clock sharp. The meeting is being held so as to formulate plans for the coming season. It is probable that both Dorchester and Hyde Park will be reinstated in the league this season.

FINAL STOCKBRIDGE TENNIS

STOCKBRIDGE, Sept. 1.—The annual Stockbridge tennis tournament was brought down to the finals, two rounds, the second and third, being played. N. R. Tucker, 2d, and R. M. Cole will meet in the final round Friday morning.

TY COBB MUST KEEP BATTING TO HOLD LEAD

Ty Cobb will be compelled to get an large a total as is possible each day in his batting average while the days are warm, for when the weather begins to cool a gentleman by the name of Napoleon Lajoie will be getting ready to add on some needed points.

Larry always hits well early and late in the season, while Cobb is somewhat shy on getting an early start. The Georgian does not like the chilly days of Spring and Autumn, and he admits that his batting in the early games of the season is not up to the standard he sets later on.

Cobb had an extended slump this Spring, and while he was trying to near the .300 mark Larry was soaring near the .500 mark. When the weather grew warm Cobb began to climb and Larry's average began to sink. As the temperature continued on its merry Summer climb Cobb's batting average likewise climbed, and one fine Summer day he passed the noted Frenchman.

The weather has continued warm and Larry has failed to deliver. Cobb, taking advantage of this, continued batting with an occasional slump that extended over a few days.

The Georgian must continue hitting at his present clip if he expects to land that automobile. He will have to hit above .400 for the remainder of the season, for the lowest batsman of the Cleveland team will certainly soon start on a campaign of his own.

CLOSE PLAY FOR WESTERN GOLF TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Qualifying and first rounds in the Western open golf championship at the Beverly Country Club started yesterday. Eighty-eight players compete for the title to eight professionals and three amateurs, the latter all being from Chicago clubs.

So keen was the battle for the first sixteen places that only six strokes separated the leaders. Tom Kerrigan, Atlantic City, had 77, for the last three places.

Charles Evans, Jr., Edgewater, the former Western amateur champion, won the first round in the open championship round, with 71, a new competitive record for the course. It is the first time that an amateur has ever led the field in the Western open event. Jack Hobens, pro of the Pittsburg Country Club was second with 73.

Albert Seckel of Riverside, Eastern interscholastic champion, also qualified, as did New Sawyer, former Western amateur champion. All three amateurs were in much play.

BATTLE ROYAL IN BIKE RACE

It will be a battle royal in the bike sport next Saturday night at the Revere cycle track when Jimmy Moran, the Chelsea milkman, and Frank Kramer, the American champion sprinter, get started in their match race for the world's all-round riding honors.

The pair are to meet in best two out of three heats riding a mile sprint, unlimited pursuit and five-mile motor paced race, the selection to be made by toss.

Moran is confident that he can beat Kramer because Goulett, the Australian whom he recently defeated, won from Kramer in a match race, but he has left nothing undone in his training to fit him to make the race of his life on this occasion.

Kramer will make a desperate effort to gain the laurels that Moran now holds and then go after Goulett for international prestige.

MATHEWSON TO GO UNDER OPERATION

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—When the New York baseball club left for Philadelphia it was made known that the great pitcher, Christy Mathewson, had not been well for some time and that he intends entering a New York hospital as soon as McGraw can spare him, to undergo certain operations which it is thought will improve his physical condition at once.

Had the race not been so close Mathewson would have been in the hospital before now, and McGraw has promised that he will let him go at the earliest possible moment.

In addition to a bad stomach Mathewson has developed into what is known as a "mouth breather," his nasal passages being in such condition that he cannot breathe through his nose freely.

This, it is said, has interefered with his pitching materially, and is in the main responsible for his poor showing this season.

HYDE PARK MEETS READVILLE MONDAY

Baseball fans of Hyde Park are all looking forward to Labor Day, when the fast Hyde Park team of the Norfolk County League, and the Readville nine, meets at the Stony Brook reservation at 3 p. m. for a purse of $100.

This is the second time that these teams have played, the first being the Fourth of July, when the former team won by a score of 4 to 3, in an eleven inning game. This game will certainly be worth the money, for they are great rivals, and a great game is expected.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

ALL THE FANS WILL HAVE THEIR ear to the ground to hear the result of those games between the Yankees and the Red Sox over in New York, which start to-day. The Yankees are the one club that has won a series over the Donovan boys besides the Athletics, and are sure in the hunt for that second place in the standing which Boston expects to land if everything goes right.

NOT SATISFIED WITH THAT LAST fistic engagement, both Tommy Quill and Young Loughrey want to go at each other again, only the Brockton boy demands that the Quaker make weight before he will consent to get in the ring again with such a tough customer as Loughrey. Who's idea, Tommy. Can't give that boy a pound and beat him.

THERE IS A YOUNG GINK UP IN Malden who is a regular interrogation point, and sends in a bushel of post cards with different names attached. Don't blame him for not wanting to put his own handle to such a lot of rubbish. He's a smart youngster—nit! But Uncle Sam is getting some of his coin on postage, so its all right.

Straight Tips:

Kindly settle the following dispute: Combs through Head to Sound, the other day, threw half a mile to starboard, we passed a boat which looked very much like "Yacht" of the Charlestown Navy Yard. Claim it was the Wabash making anchor trip. Also understand her boilers are being overhauled. Who was the Wabash going out under for own steam to the Navy Yard at Hampton Roads. Kindly advise who is correct. ZELLAN.

East Boston.

Shame on you for making fun of the old sea fighter. You must have been half seas over. Why are you "Down on the Wabash" anyway?

GLAD TO SEE THAT JESSE BURkett has got one friend down Worcester way, who roots for the team. He's a fan, and knows a thing or two. Here's what he has to say:

Straight Tips:

Right is right that all the other New England league managers are down on Jesse Burkett and his fast aggregation of ball players? Why do they hold their pet pitchers to twirl against Worcester? Why does the Worcester Lunch get boxed and hooted at when it is away from home? Why is it that even the umpires seem to cower before? Why did they try to show a wretched schedule on us? Why do they always try to make it look as if we were stealing the flag? The answer is easy, and here it is in a nutshell:

The managers of the New England league have not the ability or level-headedness to pilot a team to victory that Burkett has—and they are sore! But never mind, Jess, old scout, we Worcester fans are with you, from the first inning to the finish, so keep up, even if you are batting against a team of nobodies.

Straight Tips—What is the fastest time ever made by a horse for one mile?

Straight Tips—A bets that Lajoie struck out at bat last Saturday in Boston. B bets he did not. Who wins?

Randolph. E. G.

B is right.

Straight Tips: On August 24, Worcester and Lynn played two games, first 4-1 in favor of Lynn, second 0-0 called end of fifth. A bets Worcester will lose two games. B says game played after six innings is legal. A wants bet decided on another scheduled game or bet is off. Thanking you in advance. H. N.

Bet is off.

Straight Tips: What happened to the Hall Room Boys? Has their pay been raised yet? What is Rose Pinnot's weight?

INTERESTED GIRL READER.

The boys have harnessed up a bundle of hale by a lucky stock market deal and have been hitting the high places since. Miss Pitonof tips the scales at 114 pounds.

Straight Tips: Can you please state when Red Fisbey will be back on the job, and also decide a bet? Is Blackburn, the colored welterweight in Australia fighting, or in jail serving a life sentence?

Got to give Mutt and Jeff a little vacation, they've been working steady for some time. Blackburn is in jail for manslaughter.

Straight Tips: Who was the better fighter, Fitzsimmons in his prime or Jack Johnson. This is to settle a bet.

ALBERT AMERINA, N. M.

It's all a matter of opinion, Al, and I'm afraid that question will never be settled. The two men had different styles of fighting.

BOXING NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

No sooner had Sandy Ferguson announced himself in line for a bout with Johnson than Jabber Carey reappeared and declared that Sandy only could get to Johnson over the unconscious form of the Jabber. Carey asserts that when he last had the pleasure of entertaining Sandy in a twenty-four-foot ring Ferguson forgot his ring etiquette and jumped the ropes before the referee had a chance to pick a winner. The Jabber cordially invites Sandy to finish their debate at his earliest convenience.

• • •

One man who frankly admits that he has no desire to get into the ring with Johnson is Larry McLean, the giant catcher of the Cincinnati Reds. McLean naively confesses that he could whip Black Jack, but he does not care to pose as the standard bearer of the white race. McLean is wise in his generation.

• • •

Baldwin and Tommy Murphy had a little chat by themselves. Their chin goods ran along something like this: "Well, Tommy, we look to be the only two who can make the ringside weight Wolgast wants. I hope to get a chance at him some day. I will clean him sure in a long fight. Murphy—"Yes, Matty, there are very few good boys around who can do that weight and be good. Well, good night. I have to beat it home and lock up the chickens."

• • •

Jim Savage wants to get a chance with either Kaufman or Lang. James has a fine slam and would surely give a good account of himself with anybody.

NEW BASKETBALL LEAGUE.

A basketball league of six clubs from Hyde Park, Quincy, Stoughton, Randolph, Brockton and one other place, will be formally launched at a meeting to be held in Brockton on Friday night. The season will open November 15. Each club will play forty games, two in each week.

MELLODY WINS BY KNOCKOUT

WEBSTER, Sept. 1.—Honey Mellody of Boston knocked out Maurice Lemoine of Webster in the tenth round of the main bout before the Lakeside Athletic Club. Mellody proved too clever for Lemoine and won by left-to-head and right-to-body. Both men fought hard throughout the ten rounds. It was the best bout ever pulled off by the club, and the first time that Lemoine has ever been knocked out.

In the semi-final Young Powers of Worcester quit cold at the finish of the second round, claiming he was not in condition to fight. In the preliminary Kid Raymond of Webster knocked out Kid Magoan of Putnam in the second round.

JACK JOHNSON'S BIG SISTER IS MARRIED

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Miss Lucy Johnson, sister of Jack Johnson, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, was married to Otto Bolden of Galveston, Tex., the birthplace of the prize-fighter. The wedding took place at the Johnson home in Wabash avenue. Jack was not present.

Lucy Johnson is thirty-five years old and is almost as large and powerful as her brother, and she is the only person in the world of whom he stands in awe. Threats to send for her brought realized reforms in his training camp in California before the Jeffries fight.

"KIT" CARSON BROKE RULE.

Floyd Kroh of the Cubs isn't the first pitcher on the Chicago National League Club who this year has gone into the one night stands and twirled under an assumed name. "Kit" Carson, new back on the Coast, took a day off last Spring, pitched for a small club in a hamlet in Illinois under an alias, and performed so wonderfully that three days later four scouts for major league clubs flocked to the place where he had worked and tried to find out what had become of the one-day phenom.

STINGER STUNG IN FISTIC BOUT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Charley (Twin) Miller had all the better of his fight with Eddie Stinger in the main bout at the Gayety Theatre. At the outset Stinger assumed the aggressive, but was repeatedly met coming in with a stinging left upper-cut that soon changed his tactics from the aggressive to the defensive. In the first three rounds there was little to choose between the two men, but in the fourth, fifth and sixth Miller's clever pens asserted himself, and at the finish he was awarded the popular verdict by a good margin.

LYNN OARSMEN TO MEET IN MATCH RACE

John H. Buckley, Jr., of the Farragut Boat Club and James A. Keenan of the West Lynn Boat Club have been matched for a single scull race in Lynn harbor at 5:00 this Saturday, September 2d. The distance is to be one and one-half miles, with a turn. The rules of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen will govern the race. Both scullers have large followings, and widespread interest is shown in the event.

UHLAN TO TRY FOR RECORD.

HARTFORD, Ct., Sept. 1.—Uhlan, 1:58¾, the fastest trotter on the American track, will go against his record at Charter Oak next Monday at the opening of the annual circuit races. Arrangements were made for this event to-day.

When a Wife Fails to Show Her Love

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

HUMAN beings are the most interesting study in the world. They combine in all the peculiarities and varying characteristics of the other three kingdoms—the mineral, the vegetable and the purely animal, unawakened by human consciousness.

There are men who are mere chunks of undeveloped ore; men and women, too, who will require another, or many another incarnation, before they show the shining gold back of the dull earthly substance.

There are others who seem to be only in the vegetable state, and many who have passed at the animal stage of development. All human beings are unwakened souls, so many of them do not know it yet.

A woman who is highly and spiritually developed in the domain of the affections, and a man equally developed, happened to be talking to a mutual friend upon the same day; yet the two were strangers, and had never met, and will never meet in all probability. Both, however, were suffering from the same trouble; and both were natural or rather married to "spiritual" wives belonged in another case so to speak, in the great human exhibit.

The Cold-Blooded Vegetable Man

The woman was warm-hearted, demonstrative and full of sentiment. She was married to a man who was good and kind, but severely conventional, who regarded all demonstrations of affection, such as a spontaneous caress, a hand clasp, or a sudden word of tenderness as bad form.

The woman who came up behind her husband's chair and put her arm about his shoulder, in the presence of other members of the family, or where any eye save the eye of God could see, shocked his sense of the proprieties.

So the warm-hearted and impulsive wife was holding herself in check constantly, and always living in fear that she would displease her husband by some unrestrained impulse of affection.

The man, who spoke to the mutual friend of his unhappiness, was united to a wife of the same vegetable state of development; only with her it was not a matter of propriety, but just a lack of temperament, which caused no trouble.

She was an excellent woman, a careful manager, a good housekeeper and a loyal wife. But she was as unemotional and phlegmatic as a cabbage or a turnip growing in the field.

She had no comprehension of a nature which craved demonstrative affection; no understanding of the loneliness of a heart which gave love in full measure, and which longed for some expression, some word, some look, some act, which was not naked, but which came spontaneously of its own accord.

The Lack of Spontaneous Love

She appreciated her husband; she proved it by her good, every-day virtues. But the man wanted to be loved. He wanted to have his wife's heart; sometimes, run away with her everyday virtues and to send her in a rush of tenderness to his embrace, to say unspeakable, those delightful old words which make the music of the spheres.

But this good woman, like many other good men and women, was letting her better side of the heart of her intimate starve for lack of a little spontaneous sentiment, a little real romance brought into the home circle.

Compared with the great tragedies which mar many lives, the troubles of these two people are very trivial.

Cruelty, disloyalty, drunkenness, deadly temperers are the reasons which so many wives and husbands have to bear up earth's Calvary.

To be credited is terrible. But to be slowly frozen to death is also an unpleasant experience.

There is nothing earth has to offer human beings of much value outside of self development save a happy and serene home life.

Amiable dispositions, patience, tender words, ready smiles, spontaneous expressions of appreciation and caresses, given without demand are the beautiful bits of mosaic which form the radiant interior of the really happy homes of the land.

Why may not such sensible men and women build such homes by their daily lives; why may they not retain all their good sense, their sterling virtues and their necessary dignity, yet radiate love and appreciation in their homes?

It costs little.

It pays large dividends.

THE CALF

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY was talking to an audience of Denver gamins about repentance.

"You many people," said the famous judge, "repent the wrong way. Now, the Prodigal Son repented properly. He came and stood a long way off. He waited in all humility till his father saw him, and ran and threw his arms about his neck and kissed him.

"But too many prodigals nowadays swagger right into the parlor, plump themselves in the easiest chair, put their feet upon the piano, and grunt:

"'Say, hurry along that veal!'"

What the Moon Sees

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHAT secret things the old jack-o'-lantern moon lays his silver eye upon when he heaves over the world's rim at the time of the Elves' Gathering! The mother and father brooding over some little moon-fax sleepyhead; the man and the girl shinning down a ladder, with their little hairbrush in a bag and their hearts in their teeth (the old moon kindly hides his face in a cloud, so his white light won't fall on the face of the old dog and set him barking); and the sleeping maid with her arms tossed above her head—singing some one's name in her sleep, while Love, with jimmy and dark lantern, works at the door lock—peering fearfully over his shoulder for night police the while.

Some Letters of a Summer Girl

No. 12—Telling About Mrs. Bentley's Departure

RIDGE HARBOR.

DEAREST MUMSIE—Your letter to-day made me feel that you are worrying about me, and you needn't, darling—not one little bit. I am not unsappy, and my wrist is much better, though still in a sling, of course.

I am all ready for the picnic and waiting for Mr. Sinclair.

Mrs. Lawrence said that he asked if he might drive me out alone, and I wish she had said "No"; I am afraid of what he is going to say.

I have kept nothing back from you, dear, for I have told you all about everything I did—silly things like the champagne and cigarettes, and all. I shall always tell you everything, my own dear Mumsie. I wish every girl had some one so wise and sweet to go to.

Will Wonders Ever Cease?

I have on my linen suit and Panama hat; the girls all decided to dress simply, as the picnic is to be held on a very wild part of the beach.

Wonders will never cease happening in this world. Mrs. Lawrence has just been in and told me that she is going to Bobby Dalton's play, and myself as well. Bobby!

"But where's Mrs. Bentley?" I asked, for every one always takes it for granted that she will go in Mr. Cabot's car.

"Alone, my dear," said Mrs. Laurence. "She had a long walk on the beach with Bobby Dalton this morning, and she and her friend went to New York on the 2.30. I don't understand it, at all; unless things are coming to a crisis with her and Bobby. I mean to find out, if possible. Bobby is far too good to be thrown away on Mrs. Bentley."

Oh Mumsie, I wonder if he does like her?

"I Feel So Queer and Trembly"

This is only a scribble of a note dear, and I'll write you to-night all about the picnic.

I feel so queer and trembly, as though something were going to happen.

The car is here, so good-bye, dear Love to Dad.

Ever, your loving daughter,

PEGGY.

P. S.—If you were a man, and liked a girl, you'd show some sign of it wouldn't you? I did act as though he liked you, or did he keep away from you?

To-day's Best Story

SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON at the luncheon in his honor given by the Pilgrims in New York, told of a piece of geographical ignorance:

"It was incredible. It reminded me of a little walking maid:

"As she brought me my tea and toast and bloater one morning I said to her:

"'What a rainy morning, Mary! It's almost like the Flood.'

"'The Flood, sir?' said the little maid. She looked at me with a puzzled smile.

"'Yes,' said I. 'The Flood—Noah, you know—the Ark—Mount Ararat.'

"She shook her head and murmured apologetically:

"'I don't find no time to read the papers lately, sir.'"

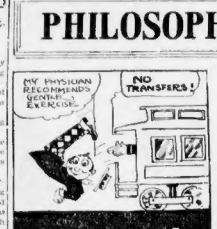
PHILOSOPHY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE



The boot and shoe trust would lose business and bust—Just read the last Leather Trade News.

BE CHEERFUL! If automobiles run you down, you still have a fairly good chance.

Provided a cop comes along on the hop and summons a fast ambulance.

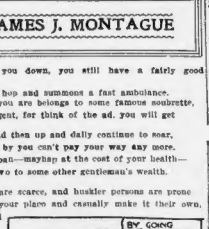
And maybe the car heath whose name you are belongs to some famous soubrette, in which happy event you're a fortunate gent, for think of the ad. you will get

KEEP SMILING! If prices still go up and then up and daily continue to soar,
Reflect that so high they will get by and by you can't pay your way any more.
Besides, while you inhale and sweat and groan—mayhap at the cost of your health—
Each day's work you do adds a dollar or two to some other gentleman's wealth.

DON'T TROTHER! If seats in the trolley are scarce, and huskier persons are prone
To smash in your face while they gobble your place and casually make it their own,
Remember that walking is fine exercise, and
If you don't wear out your shoes,

HE HAPPY! Supposing the weather IS hot, and you without money or price
To sit by the sea, or even to be provided with drinks off the ice,
The sun helps the vender of pink lemonade dispose of the water that he sells,
And think what it means to the magnate who gleans the profits from Summer hotels.

HAVE COURAGE! To-day may be cheerless enough, but ere your ill-fortune you curse,
Take thought that to-day may seem gladsome and gay, to-morrow will be so much worse.
And life, after all, is scarce more than a span, and if you will calmly submit,
Before very long you may pipe your last song, put up all the shutters and quit.



A DEATH IN THE CAMP

A SHORT STORY BY RUDYARD KIPLING

TWO awful catastrophes have occurred. One Englishman in London is dead, and I have scandalized about twenty of his nearest and dearest friends.

He was a man nearly seventy years old, engaged in the business of an architect, and immensely respected. That was all I knew about him till a began to circulate among his friends in those parts, trying to cheer them up and make them forget the fog.

"Hush!" said a man and his wife. "Don't you know he died yesterday of a sudden attack of pneumonia. Isn't it shocking?"

"Yes, said I, vaguely. "Awfly shock-ing. Has he left his wife provided for?"

"Oh, he's very well off indeed, and his wife is quite old. But just think! It was only in the next street it happened!" Then I saw that these people were not for Strange-ways, deceased, but for themselves.

"How old was he?" I said.

"Nearly seventy, or maybe a little over."

"About time for a man to rationally expect such a thing as death." I thought and went away to another house, where a young married couple lived.

"Isn't it perfectly ghastly?" said the wife. "Mr. Strangeways died last night."

"So I heard," said I. "Well, he had lived his life."

Yes, but it was such a shockingly short illness. Why, only three weeks ago he was walking about the street." And she looked nervously at her husband, as though she expected him to give up the ghost at any minute.

Then I gathered, with the knowledge of the length of his sickness, that her grief was not for the late Mr. Strangeways, and went away thinking over men and women I had known who would have given a thousand years in Purgatory for even a week wherein to arrange their affairs, and who were anything but well off.

I passed on to a third house full of children, and the shadow of death hung over their heads, for father and mother were talking of Mr. Strangeways' "end." "Most shocking," said they. "It seems that his wife was in the next room when he was for twenty-four hours each?"

dying, and his only son called her, so she just had time to take him in her arms before he died. He was unconscious at the last. Wasn't it awful?"

When I went away from that house I thought of men and women without a week wherein to arrange their affairs, and without any money, who were anything but unconscious at the last, and who would have given a thousand years in Purgatory for one glimpse at their mothers, their wives or their husbands. I reflected how these people died tended by shrieking and strangers, and I was not in the least ashamed to say that I laughed over Mr. Strange-ways' death as I entered the house of his brother in his craft.

"Heard of Strangeways' death?" said he. "Most hideous thing. Why, he had only a few days before got wind of his design being accepted by the Burgoyne Cathedral. If he had lived he would have been working out the details now—with me." And I saw that this man's fear also was not on account of Mr. Strangeways. And I thought of men and women who had died in the midst of wrecked work; then I sought a company of young men and heard them talk of the dead. "That's the second death among people I know within the week," said one. "Yes, the second death," said another.

I smiled a very large smile.

"And you know," said a third, who was the oldest of the party, "they've opened the new road by the head of Tresillion road, and the wind blows straight across that level square from the Parks. Everything is changing about us."

"He was an old man," I said.

"Ye-es. More than middle-aged," said they.

"And he outlived his reputation?"

"Oh, no, or how would he have taken the designs for the Burgoyne Cathedral? Why, the very day he died——"

"Yes," said I. "He died at the end of a completed work—his design finished, his prize awarded."

"Yes; but he didn't live to . . . . . And his illness lasted seventeen days, and his wife was in the next room when he was for twenty-four hours each?"

"Yes."

"And he was tended by his own kith and kin, dying with his head on his wife's breast, his hand in his only son's hand, without any thought of their possible poverty to vex him. Are these things so?"

"Ye-es," said they. "Wasn't it shocking?"

"Shocking?" I said. "Get out of this place, to forth, run about and see what death really means. You have described such dying as a god might envy and a king might pay half his ransom to make certain of. Wait till you have seen men-strong men of thirty-five, with little children, dying by inches, penniless and alone, and seen it not once, but twenty times; wait till you have seen one young girl die within a fortnight of the wedding-day for the lover within three days of his marriage; or the mother—sixty little minutes—before her son can come to her side; wait till you hesitate before handing your newspaper for fear of reading of the death of some young man that you have dined with, drank with, shot with, lent money to and borrowed money from, and tested to the uttermost—till you dare not hope for the death of an old man, but, when you are strongest, count up the tale of your acquaintances and friends, wondering how many will be alive six months hence. Wait till you have heard men calling in the death hour on kin that cannot come; till you have died with a man one night and seen him buried on the next. Then you can begin to whimper about loneliness and bereavement and desolation. Here I foamed at the mouth.

"And do you mean to say," drawled a young gentleman, "that there is any society in which that sort of holocaust goes on?"

"I do," said I. "It's not society: it's life. And they laughed.

And this is the old tale of Pharaoh's chariot wheel and flying fish.

If I tell them yarns, they say: "How true! How true!" If I try to present the truth, they say: "What superb imagination!"

But you understand, don't you?

A Child and Her Sick Doll

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE little girl broke her little doll yesterday.

She dropped it on the pavement, and when she could bear to look she found that the poor little thing's head was cracked clear across the top, and that there was something queer the matter with her eyes.

The little girl smiled just as hard as she could—it's a way she has when she wants to keep from crying—and walked quietly along without a word. She carried the broken doll tenderly in her arms, and when she got home she cried very hard.

"I loved her so," she said. "She wasn't so awfully pretty, but oh, she was so sweet, and now to-night I'll have no one to hold in my arms." Some one told her about a doll's funeral, and for a little while the little girl fixed her mind on that, but when the broken doll was dressed in white and was laid in a pretty box and covered with a wreath of shining green leaves off of the little bush in the garden the little girl couldn't stand it. After all, and she burst into an agony of miserable tears.

"I can't have her buried," she sobbed. "Poor little, lonesome thing. I couldn't sleep a wink all night thinking of her out there in the ground, with me in my nice, comfortable bed." For awhile it looked as if the house was turned into a place of mourning, but all at once the little girl's aunt had a bright idea.

"Look, little girl," she said. "Grace is looking better. I believe there is hope for her. Let's make her a little invalid chair and a pretty wrapper, and I'll knit her an afghan for her feet these cool days, and Billikins shall be the doctor, see how wise he looks, and the first thing you know poor little sick Grace will be the comfort and the joy of the whole family. We'll set her right in the sunniest window, and you can make her special cups of tea and——"

"Oh, oh!" cried the little girl. "Oh, my darling; she does look better, doesn't she? I'm going to give her a bath now and read to her."

And in half an hour the little girl's face was radiant with joyful hope and tender love.

And I prophesy right now that the doll invalid is going to be the favorite and the joy bringer of the whole family of dolls.

Already the little girl has found the joy of loving service. She runs up and down the stairs a dozen times an hour getting special things for Grace. And she reads to her, spelling laboriously, and leaving out every word that she thinks might hurt her feelings or shock the nerves of the invalid.

You are a lesson, a loving lesson, to us all.

Dear little girl; dear, loving, faithful heart. How quick you are to find joy even at.

SCIENTIFIC
BUST DEVELOPER

Science has at last discovered a treatment for a condition which has always been regarded as incurable—namely, underdevelopment of the breasts. Every woman has the natural right to a beautiful form, but alas! there are many who never get proper development and seem doomed to stay flat-chested and unattractive.

Sornon, the new treatment for lack of development, is for sale by Houghton & Dutton, and in every case where it has been tried has so proven its wonderful power to increase the bust measurements, that it is sold under a guarantee of money refunded. There is no massaging necessary, simply internal medicine, which is absolutely harmless, and almost scientific treatment. Def., three weeks' course for $1.00 on a guarantee offer from Houghton & Dutton, or by mail, postpaid from the Sorbo Tonic Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Louisa May and Henry Phillip

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

JUST below my window, a small housekeeper spends the mornings attending to her household duties. Her house is not large; in fact, the entire establishment is spread out on a small table. Her children are paper dolls, cut out from fashion plates.

The parlor furniture is of beautiful red satin, and the fact that the sofa has only two legs, and must be propped, does not detract in the least from its elegance.

A Tiny Housekeeper

All morning long she moves around the table, arranging the tiny furniture, making up conversations for her paper family, or crooning a wordless little tune.

When all is finished, to her liking, she rocks her doll and a black kitten to sleep.

Her paper family is a very large one. There is a mother, also a very grand looking frock-coated father, and about ten children of varying ages.

The flower of the flock is Louisa May, who seems to be about eighteen years of age. She is dressed in pink bell gown, and she has a beau. His name is Henry Phillip and he, also, is in full evening dress.

Alas for Henry Phillip! He has but one leg. He was evidently cut out from a tailor's fashion plate, and, whether the missing leg was hidden behind some piece of furniture, in the picture, or cruelly torn from him, I shall never know.

Being interested in love affairs, I am, of course, much interested in the love of Louisa May and Henry Phillip.

They spend most of the time sitting on the red satin sofa, and the little housekeeper makes conversation for them.

One scene she plays over and over again. It is something like this:

Louisa May sits on the sofa, and there comes a knock at the door.

"Children," says Louisa May's mother, "you must all go to bed; here comes Louisa May's company."

So the children are all bundled into the next room and Louisa May sits alone.

Then Henry Phillip, held in the housekeeper's hand, hops into the room. Before the red sofa he makes a low bow, and says: "Good evening, Miss Louisa May; I hope you are well. It's a nice morning. I brought you a bunch of flowers and a box of candy."

"Oh, Mr. Henry Phillip," says Louisa May, "thanks so much. I hope you are well. Won't you sit down?"

Like a Gallant Beau

And then Henry Phillip invites her to go to the theatre, and she graciously accepts.

Sometimes they quarrel and make up again, and, judging by the apt way in which the conversation is conducted, I should say that the small housekeeper had a big sister and that the big sister had a beau.

Yesterday a dreadful thing happened. Louisa May and Henry Phillip were sitting in the red satin sofa, when a rude gust of wind turned Henry Phillip upside down. His one leg waved recklessly over the back of the sofa and his head reposed confidingly on the floor. His top. Wasn't it a dreadful plight for a gentleman who was "keeping company"?

The housekeeper thought it was, at any rate.

"Henry Phillip," she gasped in shocked tones, "what you awful, you don't know how to behave when you're makin' calls." And she whisked him severely away, without ever giving him time to apologize to his lady love, or say "good-night."

This little domestic play goes on every morning. She keeps house, scolds the paper children to school, has the paper mother talk to paper neighbors and attends to the love-making of the other couple.

It Is Her Miniature World

In her baby way, she conducts a miniature world. Instinctively, she understands the love-making; the housekeeping interest is labora.

Some day her own love affairs and her own household will take the place of Louisa May and the paper family.

I always feel sorry for little boys. All the wild Indians, and ball games, and marbles in the world cannot take the place of little playhouse and doll.

The more a little girl is encouraged to play house, the wiser she will be. The playhouse is the training school for married life.

While I have been writing these words the conversation between Louisa May and Henry Phillip has languished and in the hammock fast asleep, all three, is the black kitten, the doll and the housekeeper.

CHASE & SANBORN'S HIGHEST TEAS & COFFEES

Alias Jimmy Valentine

By JOHN A. MOROSO

Copyright, 1910, by Associated-Sunday Magazines

SYNOPSIS.

JIMMY VALENTINE, the most remarkable cracksman of the age, who opens safes merely by the sensitiveness of his finger ends, has succeeded in robbing the strong vault of the Green National Bank.

He and his pal, Mike Cotton, get away to Buffalo with $25,000, and double back on their tracks to New York. In the Pullman section which they hire, they divide the swag." Cotton, beastly drunk, attempts to attack a pretty girl, who is riding alone in the neighboring compartment. A terrific struggle ensues, in which Jimmy flies to the aid of the girl and hurls Cotton through the window.

Cotton, before he dies, tells of the robbery and accuses Valentine, who is run down and caught in New York, by Doyle, the relentless man-hound of the detectives force.

Jimmy is convicted and sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing. Before he is caught he succeeds in breaking another safe at Springfield, Mass., and it is to fasten this job on him, also, that Doyle sets to work.

Doyle visits Sing Sing to try and force Bill Avery, who is a close pal of Red Jocelyn and Jimmy, to turn against the noted crackman, but Bill refuses and is threatened by Doyle. Avery leaves the prison, after finishing his term of eight years and ten months.

The following day the prison is visited by the women of the State of Hope Society, who have with them a distinguished humanitarian—none other than Lieutenant-Governor Ray, who brings along his pretty niece, Rose Lane, the daughter of an Illinois banker. She is visiting the East and asks to be shown through Sing Sing.

Handler, the warder, feels honored by the visit of Ray and decides to show him how supposes it is to try to save criminals, such as are under lock and key in the hotel prison.

An inventor, who has perfected a wonderful invappears at Handler calls for "Dick, the Kid," who opens it with a best hair pin.

That warden then decides to show what "a high-class crook" can do, and tells his visitors he has a man who can open the safe in his office, nearly by the sensitive touch of his fingers. He produces Jimmy Valentine, who is amazed to discover in Rose Lane, the beautiful girl he saved on the train. She, too, recognizes him, and tells her uncle, the Lieutenant-Governor, that the man in the convict suit is her savior. In the presence of all, Rose steps up and thanks Jimmy for saving her life.

The warden is amazed. Then he calls on Jimmy to show all his skill by opening the safe. Jimmy contends that he does not know now—that he is not a safe-cracker, and that he has been wrongly convicted on the words of a lying, discredited, criminal—Mike Cotton.

Handler is amazed, but the lieutenant-governor bids him be still and asks Jimmy to tell his story.

Valentine declares that he never knew Cotton, having met him on the train; that they played cards and he won some of the money, not knowing that the possessor had stolen it; that he had interfered when Cotton attacked Miss Lane, and that Cotton, to "get even," had accused him of the crime. The girl relates the story of her rescue and corroborates Jimmy in minute detail.

Ray is profoundly impressed and promises to use the Governor to secure a pardon. Jimmy tells them that his real name is Lee Randall.

CHAPTER XVI.

JIMMY returned to his prison duties with a light heart. He sang at his work, but he told only his old friend Red Jocelyn what had happened in that conference with the Lieutenant-Governor and Rose Lane.

He had every reason to feel sure that his pardon would be secured, not on the ground that he was innocent, but because there was doubt as to his guilt and because he had been able to defend and protect the niece of the Lieutenant-Governor in an hour of peril.

Handler knew nothing of the impending pardon, and Doyle left the prison without knowledge of it.

In two weeks after the visit of the Gate of Hope delegates and their two guards Red Jocelyn's time was up. He had worked hard, had observed the prison regulations faithfully, and time for good behavior had cut down his sentence considerably.

The promised Jimmy that he and Bill Avery would meet him outside of prison walls, and soon as the pardon came, and that, together, they would set to work to keep Doyle clear of their tracks, that they might have a fresh start in life. Red promised that he would return to his "first" gang, at least until his friend was out and they had talked together, as man and man finding a possible new life.

They parted and, in two weeks, came the precious slip of paper from the Governor's office in Albany.

Handler was thunderstruck and tried in vain to get Doyle on the long distance telephone. He was told by headquarters in New York that Doyle was busy on a case and there was no telling when he would report. Nobody at headquarters knew how to reach him at that moment. He might turn up any moment, and he might not be heard from for a month.

So Jimmy got out of prison with a fine new suit, a part of not having to be retaken by Doyle as he stepped out into the air, and held a prisoner as a suspect.

His heart filled with gratitude, and his whole being pulsed with a desire to crowd down the past and wring from the future all of the best and purest it might hold. He hastened to Albany to offer thanks to the Governor and the Lieutenant-Governor for his deliverance.

Of course, Mrs. Webster and Mrs. Moore, of the Gate of Hope Society, knew of the pardon, and these good souls put it down as a triumph belonging to their organization. They telegraphed Jimmy at the prison to come to a certain hotel in Albany, and he wired that he would be there as soon as he could thank the authorities for their humane consideration of him.

Her Gallant Knight

Not even Jimmy himself was more delighted at the pardon than was Rose Lane. In her romantic nature there was but one big picture, one that thrilled her and filled her with the greatest joy—the picture of a wiry, game, young man struggling with a tremendous brute, fighting at risk of his own life to save her.

He was her gallant knight. Had it all happened in days of picturesque chivalry, instead of in prosaic days of drunken burglars, fast express trains and prisons, he would have taken her away on his steed without protest on her part, whether he was a gentleman highwayman, who robbed only the rich, or whether he was a great noble with many castles and fiefs.

It was not a silly girl's dream picture. It was all hard reality. She had needed a rescuer and one that was fit for a terrible struggle. He had stepped to the center of the ring, ready for the battle. She had heard his fine lungs dragging in the needed air, as his flexible muscles worked against the great brawn of the drink-maddened Cotton. She had seen him writhe and twist and change his hold on the hard-breathing giant.

Once he had cursed softly as he tried and failed to get the big lock that was on to end the battle. And then he got it, and his strength was terrible. A moment before, paralyzed with fear, so that she could not cry out for help, she had thought Cotton would surely kill him. But now came the end. The big brute was sent hurtling through glass and splintering blinds with an awful crash.

Her St. Knight had proved himself a master. Her heart went to him, so it fluttered so fast that she dropped in a faint to the floor.

Her Father Meets Jimmy.

Her father, William Lane, head of one of the richest banks in Springfield, Ill., had come East to take her home. They were to start in a few days; but, before then, she wanted to see what could be done to help her hero on the right path to life. Father and daughter went to the hotel where Jimmy was to meet the two ladies of the Gate of Hope.

They found Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster there, just as a messenger boy arrived from the Governor's office with a note from Jimmy to the effect that he was waiting to speak his thanks to the State's chief executive, and would be delayed fifteen minutes or half an hour. The Gate of Hope delegates took the opportunity to have ten together in the cafe of the hotel, while Rose and her father made themselves comfortable in the parlor, pending the arrival of the pardoned convict.

"Now, my dear Rose," began the father, as soon as they were alone, "this is a most desperate thing to do—pick up an ex-convict and put him in a bank."

"Is he an ex-convict if he was unjustly convicted, demanded Rose, indignantly.

"Not exactly," the father corrected. "He said that there was a chance that he might be."

"But the Governor pardoned him!" persisted Rose.

"Guilty men have been pardoned," her father suggested.

To take Jimmy Valentine into her father's bank was a daring enough proposition, but Rose had faith in the man she loved, and she had the womanly skill to convince even her cool-headed and careful father that he could afford to run that risk.

"He risked his life to save me, dad," she pleaded. "I want you to see him. He must have the chance. I owe it to him, and you owe it to him."

"Of course, my dear, I shall see him," protested the father. "That is why we have come here, to put him in the way he seems to be trying in the face of Providence."

"Dad, doesn't it mean anything to you that I want this done?"

"Certainly it does, my dear," Lane replied. "Your dear mother left you 40 per cent. of the bank stock, and you are of age now. For that alone I should consider your request. But no one can tell about him. Suppose it should become known who he was, and what he had done?"

"I've thought of all that, and I want you to risk it," declared Rose, "and my 60 per cent. wants you to risk it."

Lane looked at his daughter searchingly. "And your heart wants me to risk it?" he asked.

She blushed rosily.

"Yes, father," she answered him. "All my life I have known men who thought they were heroes. They talked of themselves and bored me to death. And one day, out of a clear sky, when I was struggling in the arms of a bear-eyed brute, this man came. There was no blare of self-praise, no sound of bugles—nothing but utter courage. His voice was low. I could scarcely hear what he said. But it had a note of command and threat of death to it. The brute disregarded it and he mastered him, a heavy twice his size. He fought silently and killed him. And all my life that man owes me."

Rose put her pretty face in her hands, and trembled with the love that held her in thrall.

The father was aghast. The idea of his daughter loving so deeply a man just out of a convict's clothes appalled him.

THE VERY LATEST IN HATS FOR AUTUMN WEAR

Here are some of them—the advance guard of the kind of hats women will soon be wearing this Fall.

There were queer hats this Summer, but there are to be queerer, both larger and smaller, topsy-turvy hats in the new styles for Autumn and Winter.

Perhaps because women now take off their hats in the theatres, all limits as to size have been abandoned. With the new megatheriums, no one will be able to pass a woman in the theatre, once she has taken her seat. None of them, resting on a woman's lap, will reach to her knees.

One of this sort is the kind known as the "Fairy Gesgette." Rebonne being the Parisian concocter. It is black—black, in fact, is the thing this Fall—and it is a buzz creation with black feathers and gold braid and a gold tassel on its brim.

Its opposite is the "autorotte," so small it sets a cap. It fits close to the head and it is also black, with two flaring red wings on either side, folded close to the crown.

But Gesgette is not the only French model after which the American shaped hats are made. There also happens to be Rebonx Rebonx's brain creation is also black—black velvet—and it is huge, stupendous, immense. Over its top sprawls a great cluster of feathers, which seems that it costs a tidy little sum.

The truncated cone—that is not what the milliners call it, but that might be its name, according to Euclid—is one of the shapes this Fall.

You may have this variety of your headgear small, like the Frenchman's top hat as it is depicted in the comic papers, or you may have it a bit larger. You may have it of velvet, or of velour, but it must have a saucily tall feather, perhaps shaded in two tones, artuck in the back.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

DULL OPENING IN N. Y. STOCKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Dullness and general irregularity in prices marked the opening of the stock market to-day. Some of the leading issues showed particular strength, while others were inclined to weakness, but there was no one cohesive influence at work.

Canadian Pacific was one of the strong features. It rose 1⅜ points above yesterday's close. It was said that the confident feeling about this stock was based on the fact that it is not influenced by American politics, although that uncertainty did not seem to affect purely American stocks.

The earnings of the Pennsylvania road for July just published were generally expected to have an adverse effect upon the stock, but this proved not to be the case. The earnings showed a large falling off in net, but this was supposed to be of more importance as a general indication than as particularly applicable to Pennsylvania stock.

Reading was sold at an advance of ¼ point at the opening. Southern Pacific was unchanged. Union Pacific was off ⅛ point, and Steel, selling ex-dividend, was up ⅝ point.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

State Street is preaching economy now. It believes that the cause of the present troubles in the stock market is due to extravagance. Government, corporate and individual economy is advised as the only means of correcting existing evils, but as yet there is no indication that other than criticism is being indulged in. Every one is willing that his neighbor should reduce expenses, but this is about as far as the campaign has gone.

$ $ $

The market has been well liquidated and is now resting. The dullness on the declines, even if there is no aggressiveness on the part of the bulls on the advances, is taken as one of the best of signs.

$ $ $

One peculiar thing about the situation is that, while those on the destructive side have been making investigations both East and West among merchants do not find the trade reaction of which so much has been said.

It is true that there has been some shading down but this has been shown in the big lines rather than in miscellaneous industries. There is a fairly good trade for the season, and improvement is predicted as the cool weather approaches.

$ $ $

All the railroad systems of the United States are beginning to show the effects of increased wages without a corresponding increase in rates for freight. Gross earnings are all right, but the net in the majority of cases is quite disappointing.

HOT ELECTION FIGHTS CLOSING IN 3 STATES

Politics is moving fast every minute in Vermont, with election day less than a week away. There was a rally in Strong Theatre, Burlington, last night, which showed the trend of events. It was attended by a big crowd and included a large proportion of Republicans, although a Democratic meeting, with Charles D. Watson of St. Albans, the Democratic candidate for Governor, the chief spellbinder. Congressman Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts was another.

The number of Republicans present made the G. O. P. managers take notice. Five Republican newspapers in the State have bolted Dr. John A. Mead of Rutland, Republican gubernatorial candidate. He did not publish a detailed account of such bolting expenses, although there was a loud call for such a statement. This turned Republicans from him by the hundred.

In Maine the Republican campaign managers are unquestionably cowed. Governor Bert M. Fernald is making a whirlwind tour of the State, and is being heard by crowds everywhere. Still, the Democrats say that Republican managers are padding the attendance at the Fernald rallies in their reports. Plaisted is making a remarkable run for the Democratic nomination for Governor and sentiment in the cities and big towns is apparently strongly for him.

The fight in New Hampshire is now a primary one. The primaries will be held on September 6, the date of the State election in Vermont. Both parties will name their gubernatorial tickets in New Hampshire on that day. The primary nominations will include the whole ticket, including Congressmen, then the Democrats and Republicans assemble in their respective State conventions. There will be nothing left for them to do but adopt platforms. New Hampshire is the first State in the East to adopt a direct State primary law.

50 MACHINES FOR BIG AUTO TRUCK RUN

By J. C. KERRISON.

The contest board of the American Automobile Association has at last refused to issue a sanction to Barney Oldfield for a race meet. He had applied for a sanction to race at Milwaukee on September 17. The officials of the Milwaukee Automobile Club, believing that the right to run races in that city belongs exclusively to local organizations, promptly the award of this sanction, hence Burner will not be permitted to match skill with money in that city.

As a result of this action on the part of the contest board of the A. A. A., Oldfield is having a little disagreement with the State Fair officials. The latter had agreed to give Oldfield the use of the track on September 2 and 3 for his driving a race against the Wright aeroplane at the State Fair on September 14 and 15. The State Fair officials, learned in some way or other that Oldfield did not intend to use his Benz car in those contests, and they insist upon it that some particular racer or else they will cancel their contract with him.

Oldfield's so-called races, which he has engaged in throughout the country, are, according to some automobile authorities more or less thus exhibitions and lack the main and exciting features of an actual contest.

There are at least two men in this city who are perfectly delighted with the success of the recent Massey tour. They are F. J. Chase of the Maxwell-Briscoe Company and Charles E. Fay of the Ford, whose cars finished first second of the Bennington contest of the tour, and which won their individual classes. Both cars had clean road records and lost but a few points in the technical examination, the Maxwell saving one and the Ford seven points in penalization, and those for simply adjustments, which were to be quickened. Not run covering the great distance of the Massey tour.

Both cars made a clean sweep in their respective classes, and the showing made by them being exceptionally high-class and proving the stability and reliability of the cars themselves.

"I believe," said Secretary E. A. Gilmore of the contest board of the day State Automobile Association, "that there will be at least fifty commercial trucks in the Boston American Truck Run, October 21 and 22. There has been no end of inquiry for information regarding the run, and I feel that there will be at least that number of cars before the starter on the day of the run. Everyone seems to be enthusiastic over the idea. They are talking about it to a considerable degree and there is no question that it will be a success.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., president of the Motor Cups Holding company, announces the entry of Harry Grant in the Wheatley Hills Sweepstakes, which will be run in conjunction with the Vanderbilt Cup race on Saturday, October 1, over the Long Island Motor Parkway. The car which is made by the Peerless Motor Company of Trenton, N. J., is owned by Washington A. Roebling, and Mr. Roebling has named E. H. Sherwood, a driver who has been doing good work on road and track, to pilot his car. The machine has a bore of 4¾ inches and a stroke of five inches, making a piston displacement of approximately 350 cubic inches. To be eligible to compete for the Wheatley Hills trophy, cars must have a piston displacement of 231 to 300 cubic inches.

LAND DEAL RESULTS IN COURT APPEAL

Austin D. Collins, in a bill in equity filed in the Superior Court, is seeking to have Charles F. Gaussell, executor, ordered to carry out an agreement to convey real estate on Commonwealth avenue, Allston, and on Brighton street, Brighton district. The terms of the sale were to be $50,000 cash and a mortgage for $7,000 upon the delivery by Gaussell of a satisfactory deed. A title to the property was found, and to cure the same a petition was granted to the Land Court, which held that a decision is about to be made by that court. Collins has been informed by the attorney for the defendant that Gaussell does not intend to make a conveyance to Collins. The latter, therefore, asks that Gaussell be restrained from making other disposition of the land, and that he be ordered to complete his agreement with Collins. A subpoena is made returnable on Saturday, October 1.

FARMERS ANGRY AT BIG BOSTON MILK CONCERN

Never since the foundation of the town of Sherburne, on October 7, 1674, have the farmers of that town been as thoroughly aroused as they are to-day. Over every farmer's telephone line, and in every blacksmith shop and store, a general protest is being made against one of the big Boston milk contractors who, before the great milk strike which ended June 7, promised to pay the Winter price for all milk delivered to them between July 1, 1910 and May 1, 1911, but who still maintains the Summer price of last year.

Although the new agreement went into effect July 1, this concern, the Boston Dairy Company, never intimated that it was not to pay the farmers of Sherburne the Winter price which they were told was entered into by all of the dealers. To-day they are reading the first checks received for milk delivered under the new schedule. These checks are in payment for one week's output at the rate of 52 cents per can.

This is just 6 cents less per can than the farmers of nearby towns were paid by the Metropolitan milk contractors.

Even in this quiet community, the farmers say the loss to them will be many hundred dollars a month. They declare that they have been led to believe that this concern which takes practically all of the milk of the town, would pay the same as the other big contractors. They have been cheated, they say, by the officers of the company in vehement terms but say that no satisfaction was given. They declare that Treasurer Grunstein, talking for the Dairy company, told them that the farmers, of two or three other producers the farmers of this district confirmed to send milk to the Boston Dairy Company. We, of course, expect the Winter price when the strike ended, the same as other contractors pay. We are naturally indignant to-day as we are cashing checks for about one cent more a can than the amount originally paid before the trouble with the contractors."

We Call This a Country of EQUALITY—

And It Is Really a Country of Classes, Privileges and Graft

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

A woman was arrested the other day for smuggling—her name is Mrs. Adriance.

This lady hid a necklace in her hat, and had, besides, a large collection of jewelry said to be worth one hundred thousand dollars.

This cheating of the government and contempt for law disturbs Mrs. Adriance, the smuggler, not at all.

There is some talk about this particular case, because it happens that the fortune which the woman spends in Europe WAS BUILT UP BY THE TARIFF THAT SHE DODGES WHEN SHE RETURNS TO AMERICA.

The fortune that bought the smuggled jewelry is a fortune made in the manufacture of agricultural implements.

Farmers must pay the highest price for these implements—because of the high duty.

Farmers in other countries can buy these same American-made agricultural machines more cheaply than American farmers can buy them.

This is done in order to protect the manufacturers of the machines that live in America—and those manufacturers are the citizens first and most energetic in smuggling.

It is not worth while, however, to devote special attention to this particular smuggling episode.

There is nothing unusual in the attitude of this woman—it is the general attitude of prosperous Americans.

In this country those that are rich—money here means power—feel that they are above the ordinary laws.

The rich woman thinks it is all very well to arrest a dressmaker who smuggles in the effort to earn a living—but it is all very wrong to arrest a rich woman who buys abroad and dodges the law when she comes back.

One class of men think it is very nice to arrest the little citizen who plays pinochle in a saloon—but very wrong, indeed, to arrest gentlemen who are amusing themselves by maintaining a gambling dive at the racetrack.

There are men who think it quite proper to regulate the management of steam boilers, the operation of street cars, the management of cabs in the cities—but they are horrified at the thought that they should be compelled to manage their automobiles with caution, and they are indignant when they are arrested and fined—more than indignant when some one suggests that killing with an automobile is the same as any other murder.

We have our big, respectable bankers, meeting and planning to minimize the extortion of the pawnshops. They are very anxious that every man guilty of usury—ON A SMALL SCALE—should go to jail.

And they, in their banks, get every dollar that can be got in the way of interest. In their trust companies that lend money on mortgages they organize graft in the shape of special commissions and extra charges which amount to usury—they feel themselves above the law.

This country needs—and we hope that it will soon have—an awakening; some earnest expression of the belief that equality before the laws should be a reality, and not a joke.

At present this is the country of inequality, the country of privilege, the country that has one set of laws for little people and another set—or no laws at all—for the big people.

AND THE MILLIONS OF LITTLE PEOPLE OUGHT TO REALIZE THIS, AND CHANGE IT.

Lo, the Poor Oyster

To-day oysters came into their own again. Everyone loves an oyster, and the fight now on between the oyster growers and Dr. Harvey Wiley, chief of the government Chemistry Bureau, is therefore bound to be generally interesting. The poor oyster, it seems, refuses to grow fat in his salt water haunts and the growers, to stimulate him, take him out and put him, with thousands of his confreres, on a raft. This raft, by means of a derrick, is dipped into brackish or fresh water several times a day.

The oyster seems to like this treatment, for his lean figure fills out and he becomes, therefore, a much more salable article.

Dr. Wiley holds that this is an unhealthy bloating, an adulteration, and as such a violation of the pure food laws.

The oyster growers take the view that as the bivalve is mostly water anyway, the addition of more water is only supplementing his original bulk. They say that Dr. Wiley's objection to the floating process is stretching the interpretation of the law beyond all bounds, and they are getting up a petition to Congress to protest.

Meanwhile, if the epicure finds his oysters lean he can console himself with an extra drink of water, and, according to Dr. Wiley, he will lose nothing after all.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

All friends of liberty—freedom to do right at all times, in all places and in all cases—and all enemies of license—permission to do wrong at certain times, in certain places and in certain cases—should work to bring about the following conditions:

The taxation of land values only, the formation of all the States of the world into five compact nations—America, Columbia, Eurasia, Africa and Australia; the establishment of oceanic local and federal governments, whose navy shall be for the cultivation and protection of marine and maritime interests, and for rescue work in cases of earthquake and volcanic eruptions; the compilation of an adequate phonic alphabet and world dictionary, so that we can have a different sounding for every meaning; the adoption of phrenology and pantheism as parts of the curriculum of our public school system; the abolition of punishment as a cure for crime and the adoption of phrenology in the criminal courts as a means to the discovery and removal of the cause of crime.

A VICTIM OF RUSSIA'S BARBARISM

Editor Boston American:

A friend of mine, whose name I don't want to mention, as I am writing this without his consent, has an old mother living in Russia who is very sick, and friends advise him that he should return home to her as soon as he can go back, or he might not see her any more. Now, this young man would go back, but although he is a United States citizen, he is a Jew and Russia would not allow him in. He is almost going crazy from the thought that he can't see her in her last days. I think it about time that the United States Government should do something to put a stop to this nonsensical race prejudiced practiced by Russia against United States citizens. It is also the duty of the United States Government to put a stop to this, as a United States citizen expects the protection of the United States, no matter what his religion is, and it is up to the United States Government to give it to him.

Yours truly,

JOHN KESSLER.

These high-flying, sky-flying gentlemen bold,
Who aviate gaily with never a care,
So, if you'd show class—Why, go up in the air.

If you wish to do something, not gaudy, but neat,
You'll have to perform higher up than the street.
The pavement is safe and the crowd may stick there,
But, if you'd show class—Just go up in the ainr.

There's many who do this, but not the right way,
Who always "fly up in the air," as they say.
They "get off their feet" and they "rattle for fair,"
But that's not the way to go up in the air.

So discard your auto and get out your 'plane,
Go skimming o'er city and country and main.
If you wish to get money and medals to wear,
If you hanker for class—Just go up in the air.

Hen, Genius and Incubator

By THOMAS TAPPER.

I.

A MAN named Robinson once wrote a book entitled "A Treatise on the Culture of the Hen." He referred, of course, to the physical culture.

I quote the following, from memory, from this book (every word has a depth of meaning and an ingenuity of application that are not immediately recognized):

1. Do not expect to make a success in the hen business unless you are willing to work at it night and day.

2. You will not get satisfactory results if you are averse to dirty hands; to very dirty hands, in fact.

3. The business is not to be judged by what children and decrepits get out of it. It demands the ceaseless labor of an intelligent person, and demands it all the time.

4. Two second-rate hens in a crate of superior ones lower the value of the whole shipment.

II.

A YOUNG man with an inclination toward art once asked me how he should proceed to develop his "aesthetic gift." (I quote his words.) I sent him the four quotations given above.

In reply he sent me the following queries as an ultimatum: "But what of a man's genius, of his special gifts? What of his inspiration? Are not thos divine inheritances to be treated divinely? Is it not true that genin makes its own way? Certainly ther cannot be demanded of a genius thplodding labor that is necessary to the man of affairs."

I could not help recalling the geniuses who settled down to the steady grind of labor, and no questions asked —of Columbus, Galileo, Michael Angelo, Beethoven, Walter Scott, Carlyle and a man of these times named Edison. What a royal company! And I thought, too, of those others, the unknown royalties, men and women who plod along day after day asking no foolish questions, always close to the job, developing their one little talent through it, and keeping everlastingly out of discontent by the simple art of worthy work.

So I sent the young man one more quotation from Mr. Robinson's invaluable treatise.

"A good, quiet hen, who attends closely to her business, will always hatch as large a proportion of eggs as a good incubator, but there are so many dispositions quite the opposite of this THAT IT LEAVES THE ODDS LARGELY IN FAVOR OF THE MACHINE."

This concluded the correspondence.

A Polite Accomplishment

By WEX JONES

AS current events indicate, there are few more popular accomplishments than smuggling, and, one is sorry to say, there is no accomplishment in which our hasty ladies are less perfectly trained.

To be sure, there is once in a while an instance of smuggling in which the smuggleress shows signs of having studied the subject with some attention, but usually there is some fatal omission which queers the whole game and gives the brutal customs men another chance to triumph over a free American citizen.

For this reason it is apparent that some instruction in smuggling should be provided for those Americans rich enough to buy anything worth beating the duty on. Why shouldn't finishing schools finish? It is obvious that many of our wealthy smugglers need lessons in their game quite as much as bridge players do in duets, and since our smugglers are not confined to any particular part of the country, a correspondence school should fold all the purposes.

A sample lesson for the benefit of those who might found such a school is here given.

What do you desire to smuggle? (Mark one line with X.)

Jewels	Lace
Eggs	Wool
Watches	Coal
Leather	Steak

This card having duly been marked (say, against eggs) and returned by mail, the Professor of Smuggling of the correspondence school, who devotes his entire attention to his distant pupils, promptly mails the second lesson.

Eggs may be bought in the United States and taken abroad. In this event there is no duty to be paid when the owner brings any of them back. However, there is likely to be great difficulty in proving to the satisfaction of the customs inspectors that the colonies were bought in this to A Plymouth Rock egg, despite its England ancestry, is almost the saw Leghorn egg.

Presuming that the student int purchase the eggs aboard, the first not to buy more than six in one the Treasury has gents in all rigid workers, and they report a one dozen or more. When you have obtained twenty-four or so perfectly matched eggs there are different ways of concealing them. Should you think of serving them scrambled when you get home, the task is comparatively simple, as the eggs may be broken and hidden in a flask or a shoe. If they are to be served boiled in Buffalo or Boston, they must, of course, be taken into the country whole. The best way to do this is to wear a bobbie sleeve, which will hold the eggs safe so long as you do not lurch against a rail. Other lessons [illegible] each in advance.

There is a great chance for ed- in this line. What is Dr. Eliot d now?

Science and Democracy

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE right of the majority to rule, which lies at the basis of democracy, has just received unexpected confirmation from a scientific investigation carried out by the French psychologist E. Borel.

By means of a series of experiments calculated to test the ability of a large number of persons to form correct opinions upon question the true solution of which was known in advance to the experimenter, M. Borel has demonstrated that the judgment formed by a majority of a given number of minds is strongly preponderant in correctness over that of a minority.

Thus he is led to the conclusion that in doubtful questions, where nobody knows in advance what the decision should be, the opinion entertained by the majority is much more likely than that entertained by the minority to be correct, and so the method of majorities offers a useful means of arriving at truth, wherever the latter depends upon correct judgment.

A very curious fact, which comes out in M. Borel's investigation, is that the collective sensibility to truth of a whole community may greatly exceed the individual sensibility of any single person. This suggests the existence of a sort of common mind which presides over individual minds, and makes its determinations effective through numbers—or, in other words, through majorities.

For instance, in a test depending upon the estimate of weight differences, the collective sensibility was twice as fine as the individual. In other similar tests the opinion of the majority was found to be superior in correctness not only to that of any particular individual, but to that of the average of all the individuals concerned.

M. Borel is disposed to believe that there exists "something objective" which determines the direction that the opinion of the majority of minds entertain on any question, but what the nature of this "something objective" may be he does not undertake to say. But he is going to try to find out what it is.

In the meantime those who heartily believe in the righteousness of majority rule may find in these experiments, conducted with scientific nicety, a new argument to prove that the voice of the people is the voice of God.
